House Votes Price Control, But Greatly Modifies Bill

Licensing Feature
And 1-Man 'Czar'
Beaten; Measure
Passes 224 to 161

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The price-control bill passed the House last night, but only after a militant coalition refused to grant powers over American business the Administration had deemed essential to check inflation.

At the end of five days of debate and one of the bitterest controversies of the session, the measure that was sent to the Senate by a 224 to 161 roll-call vote bore little resemblance to the bill President Roosevelt called upon Congress to enact four months ago.

A Republican minority that, with the help of Democratic conservatives, at times assumed control of the measure, defeated Administration amendments which would have:

1. Clothed a price control administrator with power to deny a business man the right to continue selling any commodity he had sold above a ceiling price.
2. Empowered the administrator to buy or sell any domestic or foreign commodity, in competition with private business, for the purpose of aiding price stabilization.

Machinery Is Revised

The same bipartisan combination that most certainly would have made good on its threat to send the bill back to the Banking Committee had not its demands been satisfied, forced through by a comfortable margin of votes a complete revision of the price control machinery contemplated by the Administration.

In the place of one-man domination of the Nation's price structure, the coalition substituted a price administration in which ceilings and other determinations of the administrator could be vetoed or modified on appeal to a five-man board of review.

But even after these changes had been made, a motion to recommit the bill to committee got 134 yeas to 173 nays on a division vote.

In its final form, the bill represented a crushing defeat for the Administration leadership.

Sanctions Rent Ceilings

The bill contains authority for the administrator to fix ceilings on all commodity prices after giving consideration to prices prevailing during the "base period" from October 1 to October 15. It also sanctions rent ceilings in defense areas in event State or local authorities in those areas fail to stabilize or reduce housing charges.

Without licensing sanctions on which the Administration had counted heavily for enforcement of price ceilings, the administrator would be required to seek compliance with his regulations in the courts. Violators would be subject to $5000 fine or two years imprisonment.

As it went to the Senate, the bill contained the "rubber ceiling" provision for agricultural prices which the Administration opposed but which House leaders made no attempt to modify.

Floor Under Ceiling

The provision, which Department of Agriculture experts estimated would permit farm prices to rise on an average of 130 per cent of parity, requires that price limits shall not be established below:

1. The 110 per cent of parity that was the Administration's contention.

American Tragedy

'Bucky' Porter Traded School, Home for Murderer's Cell

Less than three weeks after he had left home and school here, 18-year-old Herbert (Bucky) Porter, of Brentwood, Md., found himself leveling a pistol at Ward Loveless for whose death he may pay with his own.

The youth, son of Herbert B. Porter, a highly respected employee of the treasury department of the Southern Railway, had lived the normal life of a well-reared boy and had the esteem of friends and instructors at Woodward School, which he attended.

He had excelled in sports and the principal of the school, L. J. Moss, described him as pleasant and well-mannered. But, the instructor said, he was not a good student.

In fact, when the youth was determined to quit school on November 6 because of poor grades in his studies, his mother visited Moss and asked his counsel. She told the schoolmaster that "Bucky" was intent on leaving school and wanted to leave home and get a job. Then, the following Monday, the boy walked from his home and left a note saying that he wanted to get a job on a boat. Mrs. Porter again sought advice of Moss. The latter told her that he was certain the youth would return home in a few days and assured her that all would be well.

But, when "Bucky" did not return, Mrs. Porter asked help of police. Brentwood police broadcast a lookout for the boy. In desperation, Mrs. Porter went to Leesburg, thinking her boy might be on the farm of his grandmother, which adjoins that of the slain lawyer-squire. She of course did not suspect that the boy at that time was in the vicinity or that he was planning to rob the Loveless mansion—a plan that re-

Death Threats, Battles Over Woman Mark Lurid Voyage

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 28.—The Egyptian passenger liner El Nil crept into port today after a bizarre 94-day voyage from Alexandria—a trip marked by several knife fights among passengers and officers over a pretty woman passenger, bombings in Suez and narrow escapes from Axis submarines and raiders.

The 7700-ton motorship, Egypt's first and finest passenger vessel, brought further trouble to her 49 weary passengers when the liner steamed into the bay last night. They were held up at quarantine overnight and the ship could not dock immediately because another vessel occupied the pier. The passengers were kept on the El Nil, anchored near the Statue of Liberty.

They told of a ship's officer and several passengers becoming embroiled over attentions to a pretty Englishwoman aboard and said that several men with knives were staged.

Richard C. Watson, of Halifax, N. S., a member of the Royal Canadian Air Force who cracked up in a sandstorm in Nigeria, said he was forced to carry a gun constantly when a ship's officer—jealous over the woman—told him he would never reach land alive.

The El Nil left Alexandria September 5, witnessed bombings at Port Said and Suez, put into Mombasa for oil and finally reached Caspewton. From there she went to Lagos and Takoradi on the West African Coast.

After a long delay in search of fuel she sailed for Trinidad. A Swedish ship following close behind was torpedoed.

When there was a water shortage which left the ship dry three days, a man dressed in clerical garb who said he was an American citizen was removed from the vessel by British authorities at Trinidad after officers and passengers complained that he had tried to spread Nazi propaganda aboard.

Capture of Foe's Strategy Plan Helps Drum Win Maneuvers

By a Staff Correspondent

Troy, N. C., Nov. 28.—A second lieutenant with ten men was credited with a large share in winning the battle of the Carolinas today by Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commanding the First Army.

Lieut. M. C. Klugh, Troop D, 101st Cavalry, led his ten men in two scout cars and two motorcycles deep into the Red lines, raided the Red motor park and came back with the Red general's complete plan of operations. With this in his hands, Drum was able to plan his own battle so as to make its success almost certain.

Last Tuesday morning, when the battle opened, Lieut. Klugh took his little force on a wide sweep south of the lines of the Red capital at Columbia, S. C., and thence eastward to Camden. There they discovered a Red motor repair shop and halted to make repairs to the two motorcycles which had developed mechanical indispositions on the way.

While this was being done, Klugh looked around through his field glasses and saw a sign indicating the Fourth Corps motor park was nearby. The motorcycles repaired, he rushed the motor park, sent one scout a quarter mile inside it, and with the other attacked the dispatcher's tent. In this tent he found the operations order complete with maps and details, which he took "after a slight scuffle."

Before starting to fight his way back to his own lines, Klugh dispatched Corp. May D. Whitney on a motorcycle to the First Army headquarters with the captured documents. Whitney delivered them safely the next day after a ride of 437 miles.

Klugh reported he found only two men on guard at the motor park entrance, both of whom had their belts and pistols lying on the ground. "It was a pretty good stunt," said Gen. Drum.

Drum also praised the work of a battalion of the Twenty-eighth Division and the 191st Tank Battalion, from Fort George G. Meade, Md., for a raid today deep into Red lines. The raid penetrated the command post of the Red Forty-third Division, which was captured complete.

School Officials Ready

Early Decision Is Promised On D. C. Penny Milk Project

No time will be wasted in passing upon the school board's application for a 1-cent milk project to benefit undernourished children, Agriculture Department officials gave assurance yesterday.

O. M. Reed, chief of the Surplus Marketing Administration dairy division, acknowledged receipt of supporting data from Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of District schools.

While he was unable to say when action might be expected, Reed emphasized that the application would be considered without delay. Approval of the general plan may come any day and delivery of the penny half-pints can be started within three weeks afterward, provided that SMA does not find it necessary to re-survey the list of 94 schools proposed.

If the list is not held acceptable, in the light of Federal regulations that every eligible school must be in a low-income area, another week or two might be required to revise the group, it was explained.

More than 27,000 children in 64 public and parochial schools and seven nursery schools would receive free milk daily, under the plan recommended by Dr. Ballou and approved by the Board of Education. The District would pay for the supply at the rate of 1 cent a bottle, with the difference in cost being assumed by SMA, which operates the Nation's food stamp and relief milk programs.

School officials pointed out that they were prepared to start serving the milk just as soon as the delivery contract is awarded by SMA, even if that time should not arrive until a few weeks before the close of the midyear term. It would not be necessary to wait for a new semester to begin, they asserted.

Three Labor Bills Advance In Congress

Two Are Expected
To Reach Senate
Floor Soon; House
Due to Act Monday

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Three widely divergent defense labor bills were approved yesterday by House and Senate committee units as Congress rushed toward a showdown next week on mixed plans for controlling defense strikes.

The House was geared for action on Monday under a rule permitting votes on a wide range of solutions and the Senate is expected to call shortly to the floor two bills completed yesterday.

Day's developments in a complex pattern of labor legislation in the making were:

1. The House Labor Committee abandoned compulsory arbitration as a club. It reported a bill strengthening and reestablishing the National Mediation Board, with plant seizure the penalty for failure to accept mediation.

2. A Senate Judiciary subcommittee and later the full committee approved the Connally plant-seizure bill, the principle of which already had been included in the House Labor Committee compromise. The Senate bill freezes labor relations, except wages, in strike-bound plants taken over by the Government. The House committee dropped the "freezing" provisions.

3. A Senate labor subcommittee approved a labor policy bill remodeled by Senator Ball (Republican), of Minnesota, along lines of the Railway Labor Mediation Act. The bill abandons the original fixed period of waiting, but sets up a procedure and penalties for peaceful settlement or dispute "within a reasonable period of time."

The House Labor Committee bill, omitting compulsory arbitration but giving the National Mediation Board 60 days to settle strikes, with the Government taking over if it fails, was the fruit of compromise efforts by Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia.

Midway between demands for drastic strike-curbing legislation and labor's opposition to any statutory action, the bill probably will be brought to the House floor under a rule already granted for the original Vinson "cooling off" bill.

Wide Range Presented

That rule is so broad that any number of substitutes may be offered ranging from the sweeping strike controls proposed by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, to the compulsory arbitration amendment of Representative Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia.

Leaders apparently were forced to this alternative after conservative Democrats in control of the Rules Committee declared flatly they will not grant exclusive right-of-way to

Costly Radios Kept Pro-Nazi Paper Tuned to New Order

By Dillard Stokes

Lake Geneva, Wis., Nov. 28.—A huge radio antenna strung the length of the roof of the Scribner's Commentator office here is the only outward evidence of the battery of powerful receivers tuned to the continent of Europe night and day for the last four months.

For reasons that may shortly be questioned by the special grand jury on German agents sitting in Washington, unbroken contact with foreign stations has been kept by Scribner's, a monthly magazine of unmistakable Nazi sympathies, and its associated weekly paper, the Herald, which was maintained for 14 weeks by more than $30,000 from mysterious sources.

And to be sure that the operators missed nothing that came over the air in their round-the-clock vigil, the costly radio equipment—the finest manufactured—was backed up by equally high priced recording apparatus, so that communications and messages might be transcribed from German, Italy, conquered France and from Allied countries.

The Scribner's radio installation was arranged for and partly paid for by Douglas M. Stewart, pub-

Coils Tighten

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, Nov. 28.—Strong Axis formations trapped east of the Tobruk-Resegh zone—the elite among Gen. Erwin Rommel's surviving North African tanks corps—threw against a closing British line tonight in a desperate effort to escape annihilation.

The United Press reported the British had widened their wedge through the main Axis forces and sent one force streaking on west through Libya, paced by the R. A. F., which reported it had blown up a whole field headquarters with a well placed load of bombs.

Retreat to the west and to a junction with other German and Italian forces simultaneously and heavily engaged deeper in Libya, beyond Resegh, was blocked by an imperial wall standing athwart the coastal routes.

Column Heavily Bombed

Rommel thus struggled for the life of two Axis columns, one returning sorely weakened from a foray across the Egyptian frontier and the other formed of troops departing their broken positions in the frontier region of Siid Omar and Halfaya (Hellfire) Pass.

The northernmost of these columns had been under violent British bombing assault for more than 24 hours before it was met head-on by British tanks and dispersed in a two-hour battle, said the British command. The second column was

Two Thrusts Stopped

Red Counterdrives Encircle Nazi Spearheads at Moscow

By Daniel T. Brigham

Berne, Switzerland, Saturday, Nov. 29.—Late reports from Moscow this morning indicated a decided change for the better on the northwestern defenses of the capital, where Soviet troops at dawn yesterday launched initial operations of an engagement which has assumed proportions of a full scale counter-offensive, according to the authoritative military commentator.

Shortly after 3 A. M. today a special bulletin announced that the Russians had made considerable progress at many points along the entire front. Principal among these gains, it was stated, was that made in the "Klin pocket." After a day-long engagement a Russian column pushing up from the Volokolamsk sector was declared to have contacted another from the Kalinin area, thus effectively encircling the German mechanized spearhead at the bottom of the pocket which in yesterday's fighting was admitted to have crossed the Moscow-Leningrad line to reach the outskirts of Dimitrov for the second day in succession.

With the development of this threat in their rear, however, large bodies of supporting German forces immediately west of Klin were said to have swung around and pushed westward in an attempt to break through and re-establish contact with important bodies of infantry reinforcements being rushed up. In the face of a withering Russian artillery barrage they were forced back into their pocket, according to the military commentator, where two Russian flank attacks are now causing them serious difficulty. The situation remains grave, he concluded, but "it now gives concrete evidence of improving."

Registration of the Southeastern Industrial Loan Co., unit in a chain numerous in this area, was suspended yesterday by the Securities and Exchange Commission, latest action in a series of developments affecting the loan firm and its parent company.

A hearing is scheduled to open Monday in District Court which will determine whether pending receivership proceedings against Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., of which the Southeastern Industrial Loan Co. is a subsidiary, shall be pressed or dropped.

The parent firm has offices at 1407 K Street. The subsidiary was organized to operate in Salisbury, Md., but, according to the SEC, "nearly all the business was transacted through a central committee, composed of the Eisels and their associates, in Washington."

Reputedly a five million dollar system, Southeastern Industrial Bankers was the subject of a receivership petition filed last April in District Court by a group of Virginia stockholders. Subsequently the suit was put aside pending court approval of sale of the Eisels' stock to F. Reed Wilk, the new president of the parent company.

One-Man Crusade

McKellar War on Douglas Dam Threatens Aluminum Output

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

A one-man crusade of Senator Kenneth D. McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, against the proposed construction of the Douglas Dam in East Tennessee, threatens to cost the defense program 100 million pounds of aluminum a year. OPM officials ruefully admitted yesterday.

They declared that unless the House Appropriations Committee overrides a decision of its special subcommittee and includes funds for the dam's construction, a 60-million-pound expansion plan for the Reynolds Metal Co. will have to be abandoned, as well as a program for the manufacture of another 40 million pounds of the vital defense metal at some other location in the South.

McKellar's private war against the proposed dam, waged in behalf of certain Tennessee canning interests whose fields would be flooded by the power reservoir, is in defiance of a special request by President Roosevelt.

The Chief Executive recently has written Chairman Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, of the House Appropriations Committee, that the Douglas Dam "is urgently required because there is no other source in the entire country, either hydro-electric or steam," by which the necessary 100,000 kilowatts can be obtained in the time required.

Although William L. Batt, director of the OPM materials division, also has told Cannon that the dam's construction is "the only way" by which the necessary power for the defense program's aluminum needs can be obtained, McKellar's cam-

Policy Set Forth

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday put it up to Japan to decide whether there will be peace or war in the Pacific.

He told his press conference that the American policy toward Japan had been one of infinite patience and announced that American merchant ships sailing the Pacific will not be armed "under existing circumstances."

When a reporter asked the President how long he expected the existing circumstances to prevail, Mr. Roosevelt replied that that question should be asked in Tokyo.

Later in the day the President left the Capital for his twice-postponed holiday in Warm Springs, Ga., but he told reporters that the Japanese situation might require his return at any time.

Confers With Military Chiefs

Before leaving he conferred for an hour and 40 minutes with Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff; Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of Naval Operations; Secretary of State Hull, Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Knox.

It was the second meeting within three days of the President's "War Cabinet." Though the White House and the defense chiefs kept strict silence as to the topics under discussion, there was no doubt in Washington that the ominous news from the Far East dominated the conference.

Meanwhile, from a source of unquestioned authority, there came an unusually frank interpretation of the Administration's policy in the Pacific crisis, indicating that President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull take an extremely serious view of the present prospects in the Far East.

No Compromise on China

This Government's constant endeavor, it was explained, has been to preserve peace in the Pacific, but there has never been any question of American acceptance of a "limited agreement" which would sanction the presence of Japanese troops in parts of China or Indo-China.

There is no opening for a compromise on that issue, it was flatly stated.

In the middle of the State Department's six months of conversations with Admiral Nomura, the Japanese took over bases in Indo-China, the spokesman pointed out. To peace-minded people in the United States, he continued, that maneuver suggested an ominous parallel with Nazi tactics in Europe. It was a matter of historical fact, he pointed out, that Hitler, with his tested technique of a little move here and a little move there

Japan Says British Menace Thailand

See Cabinet Shift Pacific War Sure, Manila Sources Say

By the Associated Press
Manila, Nov. 28.—Responsible Far Eastern authorities predicted tonight that current efforts to ensure American-Japanese peace would fail and that this would cause replacement of the Tojo government in Japan by another fully committed to a war program.

The post-Tojo government, they said, probably would complete preparations for a new offensive in Asia and for an eventual clash in which Japan would be ranged alongside Germany against the Anglo-Saxon powers.

Information from Japan was said to indicate that the next cabinet might be headed by Lieut. Gen. Seishiro Itagaki, former war minister and now commander of the army in Korea.

He has been a dominant figure in the army clique's control of imperial policy since Japan launched her expansion program by seizing Manchuria ten years ago.

Has But Two Choices
Japan is held to face only two choices in order to escape from her present predicament, in which she finds herself cut off from vitally needed economic resources with her national economy sputtering to a halt for want of raw materials.

The first of these is to accept the "United States" terms and withdraw from the continent of Asia and quit the Pacific.

Competent Far Eastern observers agree that it is not in Japan's character to retreat now, especially under the present leadership of militarists who are convinced that Japan has reached a crucial point in her history and must join Germany's fight and conquer the Orient, or else be subjugated to the United States for an indefinite future.

Therefore it is generally believed throughout the Far East, including Japan, that Japan must shortly adopt the second alternative—war.

British Battleships Sent East
London, Nov. 28 (P)—United States aid in the battle of the Atlantic has enabled Britain to delegate to the Pacific the battleships needed to meet a "really great naval power," an authoritative source said tonight.

The informant meant Japan, whose strength in capital ships is far superior to that of the Italian or German navies. Against the Axis Britain needs only lighter craft.

The source plainly indicated that Britain had increased her naval power in the Far East in the face of Japanese ambitions.

The Prince of Wales, one of the newest of Britain's battleships, listed at 35,000 tons displacement, was reported en route to Far Eastern waters.

The effects of American aid, the British informant said, is "far more powerful" in its effects on the Far Eastern situation than in the Mediterranean.

Tokyo Radio Holds U. S. to Blame 'If Anything Breaks Out'

By the Associated Press
Tokyo, Nov. 28.—Dispatches purporting to describe a new British "menace" to both Thailand and Japan began to appear in Japanese newspapers tonight, as the cabinet, flanked by high war and naval ministry officials, deliberated Japan's final stand on the Pacific peace negotiations in Washington.

Nichi Nichi printed the report that more than 50,000 British troops had been brought up to Thailand's borders, among them "ferocious Indians"—in order to imperil Thailand and strengthen what the Japanese called the "ABCD encirclement" of Japan. British air forces, the dispatch said, were flying daily across the frontier in order to frighten the Thai people and preparations were said to be complete for a British invasion of Thailand over land roads.

Deem U. S. Parleys Ended
Prior to the cabinet meeting, government spokesmen declined to say whether there would be a reply to Secretary of State Cordell Hull's note of Wednesday. The official news agency Domei expressed the opinion, however, that there was little chance for prolongation of the Washington discussions.

Taking cognizance of the fact that Japanese occupation of French Indo-China has entered into the negotiations, the Japan Times and Advertiser, which is controlled by the foreign office, argued that this was necessary because of "increasing encirclement by the ABCD powers" and by Free French activities in the French colony.

U. S. 'Has Broken Peace,' Tokyo Radio Charges
New York, Nov. 28 (P)—Sharp attacks on the United States, holding Washington responsible "if anything breaks out" in the Pacific, were broadcast by the Tokyo radio tonight.

"The United States has broken the peace," said a Tokyo announcer heard by N. B. C.

An English language broadcast heard by C. B. S. quoted Tokyo newspapers as declaring:

"So long as the United States maintains an attitude of obstructing Japan's policy to establish a new East Asiatic order, in collaboration with Britain, the Dutch Indies, Australia and Chungking, we have to conclude that the United States lacks faith and sincerity in preserving the peace, not only in the Pacific, but also in the entire world, and if anything breaks out, the United States must bear the whole responsibility."

The broadcast heard by N. B. C. said:

"Despite the declaration of President Roosevelt that negotiations between Japan and the United States are still going on, the United States, in presenting its terms practically as an ultimatum, has spoken the last word."

Positions Are Opposite
"Japan has time and again made clear her position. The American points are diametrically opposed to this position, and Japan, for the sake of her national honor, cannot accept them."

"The United States alone is responsible for what seems to be almost inevitable now."

Dispatches direct from Tokyo included no mention of such outspoken comment by any Japanese sources.

Later the Tokyo announcer said: "Should Bolshevist greed cause the Soviet Union to intrude still further into Far Eastern affairs, Russia will immediately face well-trained and equipped forces totaling more than 600,000 men; 160,000 Soviet soldiers in Siberia will have to face 140,000 crack Japanese troops in regions close to U. S. S. R. territory; 90,000 men mustered in the autonomous federated states of Inner Mongolia; 300,000 effective of Nanking Nationalist China, and 120,000 first rate troops of the imperial Manchukuo army; and to all these men must be added reserves and reinforcements that can be quickly called into action."

The President's Day

By International News Service

ASK TOKYO: Right after breakfast and a few early morning line-up phone calls, the President beckoned in his watchdogs, the reporters. The exciting scent of the Japanese situation brought them in by scores, and received plenty to write about.

END OF THE GRAVY TRAIN: Firmly the President shook a finger at those who have been using their Government positions to pry open a cushy place in big business for themselves. The President hinted broadly that some sort of official clamp would prohibit former Government employees from coming before the Government in behalf of private business for two years after resigning. A verboten such as this, he explained, exists in the Treasury Department now; did exist in Army and Navy Departments during the last war.

PLOWED UNDER: Mayor LaGuardia barely escaped being plowed under this morning as the correspondents stampeded from the President's office for the phones. Listening in from the door, the Little Flower got shoved, elbowed, and pummeled as the boys broke to flash the word on the news.

RIGHTS: For newsreels and civilian defense, Mr. Roosevelt took a few minutes to read the proclamation of the Bill of Rights celebration; exchange a few photographed and sound-recorded views for the movie men.

QUICKIE: In for a quickie-talkie with the Chief came Paul V. McNutt, followed closely by Charlie Harwood, Governor of the Virgin Islands and old friend of the President.

TOMTOMS: Last official confab of the day brought the War Cabinet—Secretaries Hull, Knox and Stimson, Admiral Harold Stark and Gen. George C. Marshall. In view of the Far Eastern storm clouds, the President told them he probably wouldn't be able to stay down at Warm Springs longer than Monday, certainly not later than Tuesday.

GET AWAY: After lunch at his desk, Mr. Roosevelt cleaned up odds and ends, dictated some last-minute orders, and caught the train for Warm Springs.

If War Comes Philippines Unprepared, Quezon Says

By the Associated Press
Manila, Nov. 28.—Outbreak of war in the Pacific would find Filipinos unprepared and the civilian population of the islands unprotected, President Manuel Quezon said in an extemporaneous speech tonight. He charged his critics had shackled him from exercising emergency powers conferred by the National Assembly in 1940, thus delaying civilian defense preparations.

The Commonwealth President, recently reelected for a second term, asserted these critics had charged him with attempting to build up a dictatorship. This created so much concern in the United States, he said, that President Roosevelt asked him to refrain from using the powers until requested by Francis B. Sayre, high commissioner.

His critics, including men he termed "American imperialists," had obstructed him for a period of seven months, Quezon charged.

Freedom of speech in the islands, his political record and his recent reelection against his wishes, the President said, answered the charges of dictatorship.

Although he deeply regretted that no steps had been taken for civilian precautions, Quezon said, he had made no use of the emergency powers for seven months. When the commanding general of the Philippine Department asked him why he had not acted, he referred him to Sayre.

Only then, Quezon continued, did the high commissioner ask him to proceed with organization of the Civilian Emergency Administration.

If any Filipinos should be killed by bombs because of unpreparedness, Quezon asserted, the alleged obstructionists should be apprehended and hanged from lamp posts.

responsibility for what seems to be almost inevitable now."

Dispatches direct from Tokyo included no mention of such outspoken comment by any Japanese sources.

Later the Tokyo announcer said: "Should Bolshevist greed cause the Soviet Union to intrude still further into Far Eastern affairs, Russia will immediately face well-trained and equipped forces totaling more than 600,000 men; 160,000 Soviet soldiers in Siberia will have to face 140,000 crack Japanese troops in regions close to U. S. S. R. territory; 90,000 men mustered in the autonomous federated states of Inner Mongolia; 300,000 effective of Nanking Nationalist China, and 120,000 first rate troops of the imperial Manchukuo army; and to all these men must be added reserves and reinforcements that can be quickly called into action."

Two Gunboats Leave China

By the Associated Press
Shanghai (Saturday), Nov. 28.—The gunboats Luzon and Oahu of the United States Yangtze River patrol quietly sailed from their anchorages off the Bund early today, with their low gunwales boarded up against ocean waves, leading to belief that they were bound for Manila.

They left behind the Wake, which came downstream from Hankow only five days ago and which will remain as a communications ship for American authorities here.

The fourth gunboat of the Yangtze patrol is the Tutuila, which is tied up at Chungking and also serves as a radio communications ship. It cannot depart because of mining of the Yangtze gorges below Chungking.

Departure of the patrol boats, under command of Rear Admiral William Glassford, jr., followed by less than a day the departure of the last of the United States Fourth Marines.

The largest of the boats is the Luzon, 560 tons. All were built for the Yangtze patrol. They carry crews numbering from 58 to 82 men.

Bombs Blast Burma Road

By the Associated Press
New York, Nov. 28.—A Tokyo radio broadcast heard here tonight by N. B. C. said Japanese planes operating from bases in Indo-China bombed China's Burma Road west of Kunming today for several hours. The broadcast said many trucks were set afire and military establishments and the highway itself were damaged.

Burma Road 'Convoys' Are Pledged by U. S.

By the United Press
The United States will counter any Japanese thrust into Thailand with intensified aid to China and, if necessary, will "convey" war materials to Chungking along the Burma Road, competent Government sources said last night.

"Land convoys" would insure deliveries to Chiang Kai-shek's embattled armies in a way comparable to the United States Navy's watch on the Atlantic sealanes. It envisions an air armada that would patrol the road and "shoot on sight" at bombers attacking either war shipments or seeking to damage the road.

An American military mission, it was said, has surveyed and plotted a series of emergency airfields along the highway.

Peace or War Up to Japan—Roosevelt

until complete encirclement of the objective had been attained, had altered his troops into Hungary and Rumania until they were in a position to attack Yugoslavia and Greece.

In the Far East, in view of Japan's hold on certain island bases in the South Pacific, the move into Indo-China put the Philippine Islands in the middle of a horseshoe, he pointed out.

The analyst of Administration policy did not mention the authoritative reports received here Thursday, telling of new and heavy Japanese troop movements into Indo-China and a possible invasion of Thailand in a matter of days.

It was obvious, however, that his interpretation covered these latest developments when he declared that the Administration was thinking not only of the position of the American flag in the Philippines but also of the possible extension of control by aggressors into the whole Pacific area.

A new Japanese blow in the South Pacific, he said, would place fundamental American interests in jeopardy.

In the light of this authoritative commentary on the present state of Japanese-American relations, there was little surprise here yesterday at the failure of Saburo Kurosu, Japan's special "peace emissary" to Washington, to seek another interview with Secretary Hull.

No word came from the State Department or the Japanese Embassy on the likelihood of a renewal of the conversations.

Although the President, when asked at his press conference if the negotiations had "broken down," replied in the negative, most observers attached more significance to his reply to a second question on the conversations with Kurosu.

He was asked if the position of Kurosu and Nomura, in his conversation with them Thursday, differed any from that they had taken Wednesday night and in previous conferences with Secretary Hull. His answer was no.

The attitude of Kurosu and Nomura, it was immediately recalled, had been previously described in the highest quarters here as following closely the policies outlined by the Japanese premier and foreign minister in recent speeches to the Diet. Those speeches, it was generally acknowledged both in Tokyo and Washington, left the Japanese and American positions poles apart.

It was to emphasize the gravity of the Far Eastern situation, apparently, that President Roosevelt yesterday made his announcement on Administration policy on the arming of American merchant ships.

The announcement began with a statement that vessels sailing between the United States and Spain and Portugal and their adjacent island possessions will not be armed.

Nor will American ships in trade between this country and Latin America, it was announced. "American merchant vessels sailing on routes in the Pacific Ocean will not be armed," President Roosevelt continued, "under existing circumstances." Public announcement will be made, he added, "of any change of policy affecting any of these routes."

Newsman Reported Captured in Libya

HAROLD DENNY
New York Times Correspondent

GODFREY H. P. ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

Two Newsmen Are Captured By Italians

Rome, Nov. 28.—The Italian government announced tonight that two correspondents with the British forces in Libya, Godfrey H. P. Anderson, of the Associated Press, London, and Harold Denny, New York Times, have been taken prisoner.

Both Writers Have Seen Much Fighting

Godfrey H. P. Anderson, 33, accredited to the British army, was at Khartoum in 1940, and was at the British Middle Eastern forces as a war correspondent, joined the Associated Press in London on March 25, 1935.

He was first assigned to the R. A. F. in October, 1939, and was at headquarters in France when the British-French defense collapsed, permitting the Germans to pour into northern France.

"We were ordered to make for the coast immediately as soon as it was learned the French were likely to conclude an armistice," Anderson said later.

He escaped safely enough, but his kit was abandoned on a quay at Brest, lost with other material which the British left in their withdrawal under fire.

Last February he was assigned to British forces in Africa and arrived at Khartoum in time to enter Ethiopia with a triumphant Ethiopian crown prince. At Addis Ababa he saw Haile Selassie behead an Italian eagle carved in stone above the palace door.

He was with the British Eighth Army when it pushed into Libya on November 18.

Was a War Veteran

Harold Denny, 32, veteran of 30 years of newspaper work and the World War, in which he served in the Rainbow Division, has been a member of the New York Times staff since 1923. Before that he worked on several Western and Midwestern papers, with a recess in newspaper work for the World War.

Besides his active soldiering, he counted coverage of the Moroccan campaign of 1925-26, the Cuban revolution of 1933-34, and the Finnish-Russian war of 1939-40 among his war experiences. In the present war he was with the British expeditionary forces in France and the Middle East.

Denny served a period as Moscow correspondent for the Times, covering such stories as the purge trials. In 1936 he married Jean Bullitt, widow of Lexington, Ky. Denny is a native of Des Moines and attended Drake University.

Gondar Surrenders, Wiping Out Duce's East African Empire

By the Associated Press

Nairobi, Kenya Colony, Nov. 28.—Thousands of exhausted Italian troops have hoisted a tiny banner of surrender yesterday at Gondar in the mountains of northwestern Ethiopia to mark the end of Premier Mussolini's vast East African empire.

British-led Ethiopians, faithful to the restored Emperor Haile Selassie, were given a final smash at the 10,000 Italians under Gen. Guglielmo Nasi before the Fascist collapse.

"It is fitting," the British communiqué said, "that the African soldiers who played so prominent a part in the whole campaign should have the honor of finally overthrowing Mussolini's East African empire." (The London war office issued a statement giving "all credit" for "the obstinate resistance which he (Nasi) maintained in the most disheartening circumstances.")

After 2-Day Assault

Two days of assault by tanks, airplanes and artillery, in which British, Indian, Sudanese, South and West African units and Free Frenchmen participated, ended the resistance of Gondar.

This natural stronghold, 7000 feet above sea level, was all that had remained after the sweeping British spring and summer drives which reconquered not only the 350,000 square miles of Ethiopia the Italians grabbed in 1936, but also Italian Somaliland and Eritrea.

British tanks already had battered their way into Gondar's streets when the Italians gave up. The defenders had been blasted from the air continuously for more than a week.

(The Italian high command in Rome announced: "With all means for keeping up resistance exhausted, and in order not to expose the Italian and native populations to further sacrifices of life, the high command of the theater of operations ordered hostilities suspended at 2 p. m.")

The attack yesterday began at dawn on both extremes of the Italian line. British east African headquarters announced.

"By 8:30 a. m. the enemy lines had been pierced on both flanks. Our troops fought magnificently. By mid-day the whole of the enemy southern flank was turned, and our attack was passing around to his rear."

Car Flags White Flag

"Our aircraft in the early afternoon saw our armored fighting vehicles entering Gondar and our own troops approaching the town from a hill on the southern side."

"Shortly afterward a car with a white flag was seen approaching our forces."

Details on the number of prisoners and captured booty were not yet known here tonight, but it was understood that half of the 10,000 defenders estimated to be at Gondar were Italians.

The Duke of Aosta, Italian commander and viceroy in Ethiopia, surrendered to the British with 1000 troops last May at the hilltop Fortress of Amba Alaj, and the capture of the Ethiopian capital, Addis Ababa, occurred last April.

Shortly thereafter the little emperor Haile Selassie returned in splendor to Addis Ababa, and beheaded a stone eagle which the Italians had placed over the palace doorway.

Unharmed U. S. Major Captured In Libya

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Nov. 28.—Major Michael Buckley, a United States Army observer with the British forces in Libya, has been captured by Axis troops, it was learned reliably tonight.

Buckley, an artillery officer, was understood to have been unharmed. (It was announced in Rome two days ago that two American officers and various American and English newspapermen had been captured. Italian authorities tonight identified two of the captured newsmen as Godfrey H. P. Anderson, of the Associated Press, London, and Harold Denny, of the New York Times.)

(A London dispatch said that three other correspondents who had been reported missing in Libya were safe. They are Sam Brewer, Chicago Tribune; M. Halton, Toronto Star; and A. Jacobs, of the British Reuters Agency.)

The first American desert casualty occurred several days ago when Sgt. Delmer Park, of Phoenix, Ariz., was killed by a German machine-gun blast in east Libya.

With him at the time were Lieut. E. L. Ramme, of Streator, Ill., and Sgt. Chester B. Lewis, a Kentuckian.

War Sidelines Nazis Level Serb Villages, Slay Townfolk

Copyright by New York Times

Ankara, Turkey, Nov. 28.—In the face of official Berlin denials that the German army plans the total destruction of Belgrade and other Serbian cities and villages by shell fire and bombing, save in cases of "military necessity," reports to foreign military intelligence sources here reveal that German artillery and dive-bombers are systematically reducing central and western Serbian villages to ashes and decimating the populations.

Upward of 40 Serbian cities and villages have been ruthlessly destroyed by German punitive expeditions, according to today's information, with the worst of the destruction in the Matava sector and the Posavina in the triangle formed by the Sava and Drina rivers.

Sabac, the so-called "Verdun of Serbia," which was totally destroyed by German shelling in October, is the major city in the Matava.

German depredations in the Posavina at Obrenovac started at Valjevo and in villages between, are "indescribable," according to today's reports. The male populations of seven Serbian villages were shot in the streets and the women driven into the countryside, after which U. S. S. demolition squads and German gunners sacked and fired the entire communities.

24 Axis Ships Sunk

London, Nov. 28 (AP).—Authoritative British sources said today that 24 Axis ships had been sunk, 4 probably sunk and 13 hit in attacks by the Royal Navy and Air Force in the Mediterranean.

Since August the Royal Navy has sunk or damaged 139 Axis ships in the same waters, they added.

Action Near Bosphorus

New York, Nov. 28 (AP).—The Nazi-controlled radio at Istanbul, in the Netherlands, reported today that Russian battleship had exchanged broadsides with Turkish coastal batteries and patrol ships at the Black Sea entrance to the Bosphorus.

The battleship was not identified, but less than an hour earlier NBC heard another German broadcast which said the Russian battleship Pariskaya Kommuna had been cruising since Thursday before the entrance to the Bosphorus. It said the ship was signaling Turkish authorities for permission to pass through the straits.

Italy Seizes Copper Utensils

Rome, Nov. 28.—Copper utensils of all kinds must be surrendered to the government starting December 1, it was announced today. The decree is a severe and unhappy one for millions of peasant families in Italy because, in many cases, the copper pots, pans and pitchers have been handed down for generations and often represent the most prized heirlooms in poor houses.

Germans Stab At Oil Regions Of Caucasus

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Nov. 28.—Admittedly hit in the Black Sea corner of the Eastern Front by Russian counterattacks of unusual strength, the German armed forces stabbed at the fringe of the Caucasian oil country from the air tonight in the start of new offensive operations.

The Nazi armies of the Crimea also opened a new drive on the Red navy fortress of Sevastopol, which has been holding out in the southwest corner of the peninsula while more spectacular operations unfolded elsewhere.

The Germans said they weakened the stubborn land defenses of the port considerably by breaking through the difficult mountain passes to the east, despite alternating cloudbursts and snowfall.

On the Moscow front, some of the most prolonged and violent German pressure, the attacking armies were pictured as forging methodically ahead, slowly choking off the Red capital's communications on north, west and south.

In the Sevastopol fighting the Germans said they had captured 100 Russian cannon, 300 trucks, 22 tanks and one armored train, and that the naval port itself was a long step closer to capture.

forces earlier in the day fared less well, it was admitted, when a strong German column by weight of numbers once again broke through to the north of Moshaisk to re-establish a breach in the Russian lines.

That this move occurred at the precise moment when the Russians were apparently preparing to launch another operation similar to that in the north was borne out by admission from the Germans, who said that their progress had been arrested by "severe Russian counterattacks." The Russians claim only that they have closed the breach, encircling in the process what were described as "small but important" advance German forces. The situation was described as "critical" well in hand, however, in the 2 a. m. bulletin.

The Russians officially announced this morning that Col. Gen. Ivan Stepanovich Koneff had taken over the command of mechanized operations on the Tula salient. One of his first moves appeared to have been to launch a drive from the Stalinogorsk against enemy concentrations in the southeast where they were pushing toward the important junction town of Skopin.

Repeating his tactics of almost three months ago the Russian commander deployed with his flank apparently exposed. The Germans, it is claimed, discovered the maneuver too late and though they tried to Skopin their position is said to be serious for Gen. Koneff's "bombs" broke and pivoted to form a pincer inside of which more than a quarter of the German forces are now trapped. Though the battle is still in progress the commentator expressed optimism about its outcome, according to Russian count.

So far the German have lost at least 2000 killed in "taking" the town, while their material losses were characterized as "exceptionally heavy."

From the south in the neighborhood of the Yezno River another Russian mechanized column is reported to be moving north across a wide front to close the gap at the southern end of General Koneff's pincer. Should the maneuver succeed—and the spokesman reported "important" progress—it is believed that nearly half of General Gunderian's mechanized forces to the southeast of Tula will be encircled. What is more important, however, is that they will be completely cut off from their infantry support, and their annihilation would then appear to be a matter of time.

Nazi Regiment Decimated

Another engagement of major proportions which occurred late yesterday in the neighborhood of Maloyaroslavl was discontinued by the Germans, who fell back to fixed defensive positions after Russian artillery supporting a heavy mechanized column was stated to have decimated an entire German tank regiment.

From the northern and southern fronts other "heartening" reports included the capture of Malaya Vishera, 180 kilometers southeast of Leningrad, on the Leningrad-Moscow main line. Russian troops in a flanking operation rounded the German positions on the Vishera River headwater to seize a strongly defended heights. From their new positions the Russians then proceeded to shatter the German's strongly prepared positions into submission for the first important change in the situation on the large Leningrad-Lake Ladoga triangle in the last five weeks. German losses were particularly heavy, it was reported, while booty seized was referred to as "considerable."

not precisely located save that it, too, was threatened with envelopment and destruction.

While this series of battles raged east of the imperial Tobruk-Rezech line other British and New Zealand forces now in full contact fought forward mile by mile over powerful German opposition to the westward the strong Axis positions of Gazala and Derna beyond Tobruk.

It was the east, however, into which the imperial commander, Gen. Sir Alan Cunningham, was throwing the greatest of his striking power, for while Axis forces west of Tobruk are perhaps more numerous than their snared comrades behind them, the Axis mechanized arm is concentrated in this latter area—and that is objective No. 1 for destruction.

Bologna Division Destroyed

The Tobruk-Rezech zone itself appeared all but cleared of Axis forces, for substantially the whole of the Italian Bologna division holding the eastern side of the Tobruk perimeter was declared already annihilated and only a few of Rommel's remaining tank units still held out near Rezech.

The main fighting had swept back some 30 miles to the east below the region of Gambut where Rommel's two frontier columns moved up to the showdown to break the imprisonment or die.

British informants reported that the remainder of his mechanized forces had now been widely scattered—two, in the north around Rezech and west of Bardia, with infantry support, and that enveloped in the Gambut area having none.

In the west, just beyond Tobruk to the west, however, he still was bringing up reinforcements, for the Royal Air Force announced that big Axis concentrations north and south of the desert had been heavily and successfully attacked.

While there still was no disposition at imperial headquarters to claim a final victory, and much bloody fighting still was clearly ahead, quiet confidence prevailed.

The naval and air arms of the offensive, still in heavy action, reported a series of successes during the day.

British bomber and fighter attack upon Axis tanks, bases and airfields over a wide area met only "negligible" opposition, the R. A. F. declared in its communiqué. Bomber assaults were extended as well to Axis shipping in the Mediterranean, where it was reported that a liner and its destroyer escort were squarely hit, certainly badly damaged and perhaps destroyed.

Second Eagle Squad Joins War on Nazis

By Alfred E. Wall

Associated Press Staff Writer

An Eagle Squadron Fighter Station. Somewhere in England, Nov. 28.—Its pinfeathers gone, the Second American Eagle Squadron now is full-fledged and following older brothers of the First Eagle Squadron on active combat duty.

Today on a full operational basis, a section of the squadron flashed off the field in fighting formation and roared away on an important mission. Another section stood at "ready" with full flying equipment prepared to throw Spitfires into action if needed.

The whole squadron was technically on duty day and night, alert to fight any Germans who threatened this important district or ships nearby.

The new Eagles already have been on several convoy patrols and have taken part in heavy raids in France where they usually covered the withdrawal of main aerial forces.

The first contact with the Germans came when Pilot Officer R. S. Edner of Fergus Falls, Minn., and Sergeant Pilot J. J. Mooney of Long Island City, N. Y., sighted a JU-88, gave chase and fired all their ammunition. They said they saw their quarry drop, with black smoke streaming, but they could not vouch for destruction of the Junkers.

Cross-Section of U. S.

The squadron's roster gives a cross-section of the United States, but a great many come from the heart of the country, particularly the Southwest, Far West and Deep South.

Only a few months ago 8 out of the 26 Americans in the squadron were training at the Spartan School in Tulsa, Okla., with the Civilian Pilots' Training Corps.

The baby of the squadron is Fred Almos, 19, of San Jose, Calif., who has yellow hair, blue eyes and a downy blond mustache which fails to make him look old and military. He is a veteran of considerable combat duty, a wizard in a Spitfire.

Almos, with Melba Stepp, 22, of San Jose, and Edner, also 22, are called the "Three Musketeers" because they trained and now room together.

Chucky Thomas Allen, 27, with blond hair and a big red mustache, went through Danville Military Institute and the United States Naval Academy.

Three other Tulsa products are dark-haired, easy-going Leroy Skinner, of Joplin, Mo.; handsome Jack Gilliland, of Pittsburgh, Kans., and William Daley, of Amarillo, Tex.

Blaze About War

Blaze about the whole show, Skinner declared frankly he came to war because "I craved excitement." The squadron has broken out in a rash of military mustaches. Best of the lot is a long, pointed affair sported by Richard Patterson, of Richmond, Va., who has degrees from Princeton and Harvard law school, was an Olympic hurdler and pole vaulter and trained for fighting with the R. C. A. F. in Canada.

The Eagles' average age is 24, which is pretty young for mustaches. The British squadron leader, R. P. R. Powell, who is 25 but has already won the D. E. C., is a veteran of the Dunkerque fighting when he shot down three Germans in two days and has been victim in at least six mortal air duels.

"They fly like angels," he said of his American squadron. "They are brave and their technical training is excellent. If I have any complaint it would be that they are too keen. They want to fly and fight all the time."

The Eagles' comfortable dispersal hut is a little bit of the United States, and the American flag waves on the flagstaff near the door. But the boys know they are in England and at night they get high tea every day at 4 p. m.

Italians Report 'Notable Losses' Inflicted on British in Libya

By the Associated Press

Rome, Nov. 28.—The Italians here to free additional thousands of British troops, tanks and planes for the battle in Libya.

Both sides in Libya were alternating between armored units and infantry, and the Italians claimed additional British prisoners.

Three British planes were shot down over Tobruk and a fourth elsewhere, and in the Mediterranean Italian submarine chasers sank three British submarines, the communiqué said.

A British air attack on Naples in southern Italy last night caused "notable damage" and several fires, the Italians said. Five persons were injured. Three British planes were reported shot down by a strong anti-aircraft defense.

Finland Now Is Aggressor, Hull Indicates

Secretary of State Hull charged in effect yesterday that Finland has become an aggressor nation through her continued military operations with Germany against Russia.

"Every act of the Finnish government since the delivery of its note" (November 11), he said in a statement issued by the State Department, "has confirmed our apprehensions that it is fully cooperating with the Hitler forces."

The Secretary particularly denounced Finland's action in joining with "Hitler's puppet governments" in signing the anti-Comintern pact, which he said was merely an instrument of Hitler to wage war against free peoples.

The Finnish note was in reply to warnings by this Government that her continued operations against Russia after regaining territory previously lost to the Soviets might lose her this country's friendship. The Finns insisted in the note that they were waging a purely defensive struggle, though her attacks, in conjunction with the German army operations are endangering the supply line by which American goods are being sent to Russia, over the Murmansk railroad.

The State Department statement said:

"The State Department said in response to inquiries as to developments in the Finnish situation that the Secretary of State today stated that the Finnish note had been given careful consideration but that it had thrown no light upon the question uppermost in the mind of this Government, that is, how far and to what extent the Finnish military policy is one of combined operations of the Germans and Finns vitally to injure Great Britain and her associates and to threaten the northern supply lines over which Russia now is receiving supplies and assistance from Great Britain and the United States to aid Russia in resisting the Hitler forces of invasion and conquest, and to what extent that Finnish policy is a menace to all America's aims for self-defense."

"The recent journey of the Finnish foreign minister to Berlin to join with Hitler's puppet governments over Europe in signing the anti-Comintern pact" used by Hitler solely as an instrument to wage a war of conquest and domination against free peoples, is highly significant and can not be camouflaged or explained away by propaganda

Words of Cheer Queen Urges Dutch to Keep On Resisting

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 28.—Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands urged her subjects in occupied Holland to continue their "tenacious passive resistance to the Germans, but cautioned them against 'rash acts'."

She praised American military protection in Dutch Guiana as "extremely important not only to ourselves but our allies."

She spoke over Radio Orange, one of the foreign language transmitters of the British Broadcasting Co. Explaining the agreement between the Netherlands and the United States for sending troops to Surinam, she said it was necessary to take "extraordinary measures for protection against assaults of the enemy."

The Queen declared the Nazis had "miscalculated" in attempting to subjugate Holland because they "did not realize how your resistance to oppression would grow."

She said she heard with "sorrow and indignation" that German occupation authorities "seek to force you by roundabout methods to take part in the struggle against your own country, how they arbitrarily drag your men and women into prisons, how they let you suffer from lack of elementary foods and how they persecute the Jews in an abominable way."

German propaganda, she said, "rolls off you because it is too stupid, too transparent, too crude and entirely unbelievable."

The Nazis, she said, "did not realize your enormous power of resistance, your inexhaustible hope and confidence, yes, your conviction that the enemies of our dear country will be destroyed."

attacks on nations engaged in defending themselves.

"The Secretary went on to say that the department was giving careful attention to all the reports and information which might furnish a definite answer to this question. The concern of this Government, which has been emphasized by the studies made by the War Department and the statement of the Secretary of War on November 25 as to Finnish policy in this regard, has been made abundantly clear to the Finnish government, the secretary said.

Housing Fund Bill Approved For FWA Solely

Copyright by New York Times.

The long-simmering quarrel within the Administration over defense housing broke out in Congress yesterday when the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee approved a bill authorizing another 300 million dollars but specifying that not a penny of it should be spent by Nathan Straus' United States Housing Authority. Straus declined to comment pending study of the bill.

As with the two previous Lanham appropriation bills, the money is to go to the Federal Works Administration, whose former chief, John M. Carmody, recently was transferred by President Roosevelt to the Maritime Commission. But the FWA is required to hand over the money to the Public Buildings Administration, the War Department or the Navy Department, and the committee wrote in an amendment stipulating that none of it should be spent for slum clearance.

This means still another policy about defense housing, for the 290 million dollars appropriated by the previous Lanham Act has been divided among the Public Buildings Administration, the United States Housing Authority and the Division of Defense Housing, an agency within the Federal Works Administration itself. In addition, the Army had turned over to the Public Buildings Administration a 45-million-dollar appropriation for housing families of enlisted men, while the Navy itself is spending another 45 million on homes for its personnel.

Bad feeling between Straus and Carmody, and between Carmody and Charles F. Palmer, the defense housing coordinator, has brought bitter exchanges in recent months and the House committee commented last night on the "confusion" in the program.

"To prevent further confusion," it said, "and to dissipate that which has occurred, the committee recommends that the Federal Works Administrator be directed to act through the PBA or, in his discretion, through the War and Navy Departments for the construction of houses authorized under this act."

"Some confusion seems to exist as to the relative responsibilities of the coordinator of defense housing and the Federal works administrator with reference to houses constructed

SEC Suspends Loan Firm Stock Issue

Interest to Wills and turn over one-half the proceeds to stockholders. The latter were notified of this plan and Monday's hearing in Justice Pine's court is for the purpose of deciding whether the deal shall be ratified.

World War Receivership

If the court approves, stockholders will be automatically enjoined from further receivership proceedings, H. Winship Wheatley, counsel for the Eisels, explained. If the stock transfer is rejected, the April receivership petition may be revived.

Clifton M. Eisels lives in Bethesda, Md., and Lewis in Chevy Chase, Md.

According to the SEC's 20-page opinion, the brothers conceived the idea of a "southeastern system" of loan and discount companies in 1930. The commission conducted an exhaustive investigation of the entire system, although its opinion directly involves only the relatively minor Southeastern Industrial Loan Co., of Salisbury, Md.

The practical effect of yesterday's SEC order is to prohibit that particular subsidiary from selling securities to the public. However, it has voluntarily refrained from selling stock since the notice of a SEC hearing before a trial examiner was filed.

The company's registration statement was filed on August 12, 1939, and became effective the following November. As amended, it covered a public offering of 10,000 shares of preferred stock, $20 par value, and 10,000 shares of common stock, no par value. Sales were to be in units of one share of preferred and one of common stock at $25 per unit.

According to the commission, under the legislation," it continued, pointing out that the function of the coordinator is to inform President Roosevelt of the need for defense houses and the function of the administrator is to construct, rent and dispose of them.

President Roosevelt had requested Congress to appropriate the additional $300,000,000—approximately the cost of housing 75,000 families—last July but the committee decided first to make a Nation-wide inspection of what was being done. Members returned several weeks ago from their 10,000-mile trip with the statement that the program was "95 per cent correct."

about $117,000 was subscribed before the sale was halted at the outset of the Federal inquiry.

The commission's opinion, unanimous but with Commissioner Burke not participating, charged various irregularities to the Southeastern Industrial Loan Co. They included: Although the firm was registered to do business in Wisconsin, Dorchester and Worcester Counties, over 90 per cent of the total amount loaned represented discounts of commercial paper or other commercial transactions handled chiefly through Washington.

Many of its loans were nonconforming.

A claim by the registrant that Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., is not controlled by "any individual or group by reason of stock ownership or otherwise therein," when investigation disclosed that "Bankers is under the direct control and domination of the two Eisels brothers."

Alleged irregularity in audits of the company's books.

According to the SEC, Southeastern Bankers, Inc., holds or did hold direct voting control of the following companies:

Personal Service, Inc., Clarksburg, W. Va.; Personal Service, Inc., Roanoke, Va.; Washington Industrial Loan Co., Washington, D. C.; Personal Service, Inc., Charleston, W. Va.; Southeastern Discount Co., Hyattsville, Md.; Hagerstown Industrial Savings & Loan Co., Hagerstown, Md.; Southeastern Discount Co., Silver Spring, Md.

Also Southeastern Finance Corporation, Roanoke, Va.; Southeastern Discount Co., Bethesda, Md.; Southeastern Savings & Loan Co., Charles Town, W. Va.; Southeastern Discount Corporation, Washington, D. C.; Frederick Industrial Loan Co., Frederick, Md.; Annapolis Industrial Loan Co., Annapolis, Md.; Southeastern Industrial Loan Co., Salisbury, Md.

The parent company, continued the Securities Commission, also held nonvoting interest in the Southern Industrial Loan Corporation, Covington, Va.; Southern Industrial Loan Corporation, Waynesboro, Va.; Clarksburg Loan Co., Clarksburg, W. Va.; City Industrial Loan Co., Hyattsville, Md.; Hagerstown Industrial Loan Co., Hagerstown, Md.; and Southeastern Small Loan Corporation, Roanoke, Va.

In hearings before the commission, the Southeastern Industrial Loan Co. registrant, was represented by William A. Roberts, Charles B. McInnis and Samuel Shapiro. Lawyers for the SEC registration division were William M. Malone, James P. Goode, E. Russell Kelly and Lester E. Mallonee.

House Passes Modified Price-Control Measure

templed limit.

2. The market price prevailing for the commodity on October 1, which, for some farm produce, would maintain present levels of 135 per cent of parity.

3. The average prices during the period from July 1, 1919, to June 30, 1929.

Leon Henderson, the present price administrator, who is expected to administer the legislation, has told Congress he intends to restrict prices on a relatively few key commodities. He insisted at the same time, however, that no price control could be successful without licensing powers by which he hoped to be able to police prices in retail as well as wholesale businesses.

An amendment offered by Representative Robertson (Democrat), of Virginia, to prevent wage increases deemed to be inflationary, brought Majority Leader McCormack to the floor with the first of two impassioned appeals for harmony. McCormack said the amendment would suspend existing labor legislation and deny the working man the right of collective bargaining. The proposal lost on a division vote, 102 to 43.

On the licensing provision, the leadership, at the end of a nine-hour session last night, accepted defeat almost without a fight. An amendment carrying the license authority was knocked down on a voice vote.

With this amendment out of the way and with the Administration beaten on its insistence on wide buying and selling powers and in its opposition to the board of review, the Republicans were to have withheld motion for recommittal.

Representative Jessie Sumner (Republican), of Illinois, upset the arrangements, however, by jumping to her feet and moving the bill back to committee. Apparently surprised, Speaker Rayburn asked "the gentleman" if she were "opposed to this bill." She answered quickly, "Yes, I am."

Representative Cooley (Democrat), of North Carolina, who had called the bill "repugnant" to the American system and the "most vicious" measure the House has ever been asked to pass, demanded a roll call, but lacked support and Rayburn ordered a division.

Cooley got his roll call on passage of the bill a few minutes later after the chamber approved the measure by a 191-to-120 division vote.

Meat-Packing Firms Are Indicted for Price Conspiracy

By the Associated Press
Chicago, Nov. 28.—Fifty-two defendants were indicted by a Federal grand jury today on charges of conspiracy to fix the prices paid producers for livestock and to fix the prices charged for meat.

Fourteen meat-packing firms, the American Meat Institute and 37 individuals were named defendants. The indictment charged that the packers belonging to the meat institute sell annually in excess of $2,500,000,000 worth of meat, representing approximately 90 per cent of the total amount of meat sold in the United States.

It charged that for 13 years the defendants had engaged in a conspiracy, to fix the prices paid to farmers for this meat.

Hat Makers Also Named

Philadelphia, Nov. 28 (AP).—A Federal grand jury today indicted 18 hat-manufacturing firms, 30 of their officers and officials, a labor union, four of its locals and six union officials on charges of conspiring to fix prices on Army field hats purchased by the War Department.

The union is the A. F. L. United Hatters, Cap and Milliner Workers International, and the locals named are in Philadelphia, New York, Chicago and St. Louis. The hat-manufacturing firms are in the same cities and Kansas City.

The Justice Department described the case as "a Nation-wide conspiracy by the hat manufacturers and the labor union to fix prices of Army field hats and to limit and restrict quantities of hats upon which each manufacturer would bid."

Approximately six million field hats of the type used in summer and by troops in training or on maneuvers in the Southern States have been ordered by the War Department, the announcement said.

Rail Accidents Show Slight Gain Over 1940

By the Associated Press
Interstate Commerce Commission reports yesterday showed a substantial increase in train accidents this year over 1940, but officials of the Association of American Railroads said it was not out of proportion to the increase in traffic.

An I. C. C. tabulation for the first nine months of 1941 listed 6611 accidents of all kinds compared with 5080 in the same period last year. While the number of accidents increased, there have been only five fatalities among passengers compared with 66 in the first nine months of 1940.

The Association of American Railroads figured the accident rate for the first eight months of this year was six for each million locomotive miles, compared with 5.43 for 1940. The rate in 1929, the railroads' record year for traffic, was 9.57 and back in 1923 it was 15.2.

Other figures for 1941 compared with 1940:
Employees on duty: Killed, 513 and 384; injured, 18,057 and 13,041.
Highway grade crossing casualties, including both trespassers and non-trespassers: Killed, 1339 and 1224; injured, 3271 and 2998.

President Proclaims Dec. 15 National 'Bill of Rights Day'

Aboard Roosevelt Train en route to Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 28, President Roosevelt called upon the American people today to observe December 15 as "Bill of Rights Day," to cherish the "immeasurable privileges which the charter guaranteed," and to "rededicate its principles and its practice."

The date marks the 150th anniversary of the appending to the Constitution of the first ten amendments, which guaranteed freedom of religion, press, speech and assembly and a right to petition the Government for redress of grievances.

In a proclamation, Mr. Roosevelt set the day apart "as a day of mobilization for freedom and for human rights, a day of remembrance of the democratic and peaceful action by which these rights were gained, a day of reassessment of their present meaning and their living worth."

The proclamation added: "The first ten amendments, the great American charter of personal liberty and human dignity, became a part of the Constitution of the United States on the fifteenth day of December, 1791.

"It is fitting that the anniversary of its adoption should be remembered by the Nation which, for 150 years, has enjoyed the immeasurable privileges which that charter guaranteed: The privileges of freedom of religion, freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of assembly and the free right to petition the Government for redress of grievances."

McKellar's War on Douglas Dam May Cost 100 Million Tons of Aluminum

plan has been successful to date in effecting the Appropriations Subcommittee veto.

The Tennessee has also warned that he will carry his war campaign to the Senate Appropriations Committee, of which he is ranking majority member. He has also written its chairman, Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, asking the committee not to "kick me in the pants about this matter."

Informed OPM experts declared, however, that unless the Douglas Dam is authorized for immediate construction, projected expansions of three munitions plants in the South—St. Louis, and Chattanooga, Tenn., and Huntsville, Ala.—will have to be abandoned, along with the aluminum program.

In addition, they said, unless there are exceptionally heavy rains in the area next year, drastic rationing of electricity to an extent not yet experienced, must be instituted. The probable power curtailment is already being referred to in OPM as the "McKellar Blackout."

McKellar's power feud with the OPM flared a few days ago as another phase when he met with OPM Priorities Director Donald M. Nelson to protest against the current power-freezing order in the Southeastern States because it prohibited night football games at the Crump Stadium in Memphis, named for E. H. Crump, Democratic boss of Tennessee.

Accompanied by Mayor Walter Chandler of Memphis, and Mayor William Cummings of Nashville, McKellar launched into what was described by observers as a "stump speech," in which he accused Nelson of singling out Tennessee for discriminatory treatment in the power-freezing order.

Nelson, attempting to explain that seven other Southeastern States were identically affected, was then accused by McKellar of being "the worst enemy to the South since Gen. Sherman," it was reported.

Observers added that Nelson attempted to describe the facts which necessitated the curtailment, but was continually cut short by the furious McKellar, who finally declared that OPM officials were "crooks."

Nelson rose, it was said, and told the angry Tennesseean that he refused to be "crushed" at McKellar. It was reported, rose from his chair, and placing a good ten feet between himself and Nelson, raised his fist and shouted:

"You are a ——— liar!"

Calmed down, McKellar agreed to review the facts, but has not raised the question since.

Suggests Alternatives

In opposing the Douglas Dam, McKellar has declared that alternative proposals are possible to provide the power. He has suggested steam plants, or two dams on the Holston River, or dams on the Cumberland River.

The Holston Dams, he has stated, would flood only half the amount of farm land, and were recommended first by the TVA as a means of solving the power needs for the aluminum program.

In answer, Batt and TVA officials have written the House Appropriations Committee that the Douglas Dam is essential because:

1. Neither the Holston or Cumberland Dams or steam plants could be completed in time to deliver power in 1942, and that their construction, in place of the Douglas Dam, would lose a full year of power production.

2. The Holston Dams would cost 48 million dollars, as against the Douglas Dam's 32 millions.

3. The construction of the Holston dams might not even be able to deliver power in 1944, because of the low stream flow behind them.

Contingent on Early Start

They have explained that the original recommendation for the structures on the Holston was made last spring, and was contingent on construction starting last summer.

They were recommended in place of the Douglas project, TVA and OPM power officials admit, because of the desirability of minimizing the flooding of fertile farm land. But since they were not authorized, last summer, the necessity arose for the Douglas Dam, even though it would require the flooding of 12,000 acres of first and second class agricultural land.

Despite the larger amount of land that would be lost, only 700 families would have to be moved by the Douglas project, as against 1100

Nelson Suspends Ban On Use of Tinfoil

Donald M. Nelson, director of priorities, announced yesterday that the order of November 24 banning the use of lead and tinfoil for wrapping cigarettes, chewing gum, candy and other products, had been suspended for 30 days.

During this period of suspension an investigation will be made, Nelson said, to get "all the facts on which the order was based."

Earlier this week the Reynolds Metals Co. protested the restriction order, saying it was unnecessary and would throw about 2000 people out of work.

families who would be displaced by the Holston dams, OPM studies show.

In his letter to Senator Glass, however, McKellar condemned the Douglas project with violent denunciation of J. A. Krug, head of the OPM power branch, and David S. Lilienthal, chairman of TVA, whom he termed "smart alecks" five times in the letter, and "Big licks" twice.

Fruit of Their "Egotism"

He attributed no specific motive, however, to Krug's and Lilienthal's recommendations for the Douglas Dam, except that it was the fruit of their "egotism."

The Tennesseean added that there are five canneries in the area, doing a business of one million dollars annually, and that the Farm Bureau Federation of Tennessee filed a brief opposing the dam.

Subsequently, however, a delegation of farmers claiming to represent 75 per cent of the farms in the affected area, testified before Cannon's committee that they favored the dam for national defense, despite "whatever sacrifices are necessary," according to their spokesman.

The full House Appropriations Committee is expected to consider the appropriation early next week. It was considered unlikely, however, that it would override its subcommittee.

Navy Recruits

Axis propagandists abroad are doubtless already at work preparing their interpretation of the news that volunteer enlistments in the Navy are considerably below expectations. In fact, they have dropped off 15 per cent since the torpedoing of the Kearny and Reuben James. That the Axis spokesmen will distort the news to suit their own purposes goes without saying. For it has been a consistent policy of the Axis to seize on every news item which can be made to support the argument that Americans don't want to fight. The drop in enlistments, however, is less an indication of our apathy toward the war than a reflection of our confused state of mind arising out of our "half-in, half-out" war status.

The Navy Department has announced that the 15 per cent drop in enlistments is largely due to the reluctance of parents to sign the necessary consent papers for sons who are still minors. Their point of view is, of course, perfectly understandable. The Navy is engaged in a shooting war now; the Army is not. Service in the Navy therefore entails far greater immediate risks than service in the Army. Moreover, some parents argue, why should their sons have to serve the Navy anywhere in the world, while Army youths are guaranteed territorial restrictions of service? To parents who reason thus there is no satisfactory answer short of equal restrictions, or equal lack of restrictions—and equal risks—for both services.

Before the Navy resorts to inducting selectees it will apparently make a more intensive effort to stimulate enlistments by advertising and by lowering its traditionally stiff physical requirements. In the past some thousands of men suffering from minor ailments have been rejected. It is now planned to accept those whose deficiencies of eyesight or teeth would ordinarily keep them out of the Navy. But this new policy is at best makeshift. It does not guarantee sufficient personnel for projected Navy expansion. It involves a physical rehabilitation program which the Navy ought not to have to undertake. Worst of all, it provides Axis propagandists with an arguing point which they can exploit as convincing evidence of America's inability to make up its mind about the war.

Moral Bankruptcy

The other day at Atlanta Gov. Gene Talmadge publicly confessed that he had once participated in the extrajudicial flogging of a Negro. Considering the kind of people who become heads of governments nowadays, the confession is much less shocking than it might have been a generation ago. It will certainly surprise no one who is acquainted with Governor Talmadge's psychology and general sociological outlook. Neither will his smug and unctuous observation that "maybe I wasn't in such bad company after all." The company to which Governor Talmadge was alluding himself was that of St. Paul the Apostle. St. Paul before his conversion had persecuted the Jewish Christians and had even consented to the lynching of St. Stephen. "That," said the Governor, "proves to me that good people can be misguided and do bad things." The implication here seems to be that while it is wrong to flog Negroes and stone Christians, a bad deed committed by a good man is somehow in a separate category from that of a bad deed by a bad man. Or possibly that "goodness" and "badness" may be somehow independent of good or bad actions.

Georgia's Governor made these extraordinary statements at hearings on a petition for the pardon of six Ku Klux Klansmen who had been convicted and imprisoned for the flogging of union mill workers four years ago. Those observations are the very essence of right reason compared to statements at the same hearing by one Ike Wingrow, attorney for the Klansmen. "It may seem strange," said Mr. Wingrow, "for a Jew to say this, but I honor the Ku Klux Klan. These Klansmen were trying to do the right thing even if they used the wrong methods. If I were Cyclops of the Ku Klux Klan, I would be proud of it." Such an utterly irrational defense of the utterly irrational principle represented by the Ku Klux Klan is an ominous indication of the state of moral bankruptcy at which this world, including the State of Georgia, has now arrived.

Washington's Problem

At least one constructive development has come out of the controversy in the House District Committee over venereal disease in Washington. Members of the committee and Commissioner Guy Mason have interested themselves in modernizing the city's sanitary code and in improving health conditions in general. That is a net gain. As Dr. Thomas Parrott told the committee, Washington's draft rejection record for syphilis and gonorrhea is "scandalous." But if the committee will give Health Officer Ruhland the cooperation it has promised, syphilis and gonorrhea and related diseases now flourishing in the Capital can be brought under control. And a great many lives can be saved. The disturbing fact about this episode is the attempt of the committee and Mr. Mason to put Dr. Ruhland on the gridiron because of shortcomings in the local health program for which Congress and the Commissioners are largely responsible.

This grand exhibition of buck-passing will make little impression on local residents. For it is a well known fact that Dr. Ruhland has led the city in an effective fight against disease in recent years. Since he became health officer truly remarkable strides have been made in reducing the death rates for such maladies as pneumonia, diphtheria and tuberculosis. Infant mortality has been greatly reduced, and the whole city is approaching a normal health record for the first time in its history. But, of course, much remains to be done. Progress in many fields has been checked by the refusal of the Board of Commissioners and Congress to appropriate funds for equipment and personnel. Washington is at the bottom of the spending list among States with which the Federal Government is cooperating in the fight against social diseases.

Commissioner Mason forgot this when he said that Dr. Ruhland had been given an "absolutely free hand." He forgot to mention that the Commissioners slashed the budget requested by the Health Department for the current fiscal year from $922,487 to $703,767. Even Congress was more generous to the department than were the Commissioners. The fact is that the Commissioners have slashed the health budget consistently year after year. In view of that record, it is absurd to assume that the health officer has had a "free hand." A free hand is of no use unless there is something in it.

The parsimony at the expense of the District's health is not sufficiently understood by the public. Two years ago Dr. Ruhland and the United States Public Health Service made a special study of syphilis in Washington. The condition they reported was, and remains, a national disgrace. On the basis of these findings Dr. Ruhland asked for 13 physicians to work exclusively on venereal-disease control. Congress granted him 10 such physicians in the 1942 budget. He asked for five clerks for venereal-disease clinics and was allowed three. Because of the acute shortage of personnel the city's two chief venereal-disease clinics operate on a half-time basis. For the fiscal year 1943 Dr. Ruhland requested $72,130 for a major extension of syphilis controls, but there are rumors that the Commissioners have severely pruned even this item.

The whole picture reduces to an absurdity that would be funny if it were not so tragic for this large and growing city. The Health Department is denied the funds it needs properly to control syphilis, tuberculosis and other maladies year after year. Then the officials and legislators responsible for this gross negligence suddenly get excited and try to unload all blame for continuance of preventable diseases upon the health officer. The position taken by the House committee is particularly untenable because it wants to enforce costly and almost futile examinations of restaurant employees before the rudimentary safeguards against syphilis have been set up. If the committee and the Commissioners are really interested in clearing up this plague in Washington, the most effective step they can take is to give Dr. Ruhland the funds he needs to put his program into operation.

Light Tanks

When the American M3 light tank to which Secretary Stimson has just paid tribute was first approved for production, military technicians claimed that it was probably the best light tank in the world. That they were not far wrong seems to have been proved in Libya. For M3's have reportedly met and repulsed German units consisting of medium-sized tanks with heavier armor and greater fire power. There was never any doubt about the remarkable speed, maneuverability and mechanical reliability of the 13-ton M3's. But they were not designed to take on medium-sized tanks weighing more than 20 tons and firing much larger shells. In some instances, apparently, when hit directly by shells from German tanks mounting 75-millimeter guns, the M3's have naturally been knocked out of action. Yet their own 37-millimeter armor-piercing shells apparently penetrate the armor of the heavier tanks. Much of the success of the M3's in Libya has been ascribed to their ability to withstand damage which would incapacitate other tanks. But an equally important factor—and one about which some military authorities over here have been dubious—has been the "know-how" of the British crews. In the months since M3's began to reach North Africa in quantity the British have obviously mastered the job of M3 operation and maintenance. Our own officers and technical sergeants have assisted in the training of the crews. Indeed, according to cabled reports, Americans are now right up in front advising and helping with tank maintenance during the offensive. Their presence is a guarantee, of course, that the lessons of tank warfare in Libya will be passed on to the War Department as soon as possible. For the Libyan campaign, in which not only American-built tanks but armored cars and planes are participating, is to this country what the Spanish Civil War was to Germany: a proving ground for mechanized equipment.

Not the least of Libyan lessons may be additional information on how to develop antitank defense. Lieut. Gen. McNair, who is directing the current maneuvers in North Carolina, recently disclosed that a good deal more attention will be paid to such defense. In effect, of course, this means that the more deadly the M3 is in actual combat, the greater the problem of creating an adequate defense. As always in the history of military science, the appearance of an effective offensive weapon creates an urgent demand for a correspondingly effective defensive weapon.

House Delays

Every housewife could tell Congress that while the legislators have been dallying with price-control legislation, prices have not been standing still. The Department of Labor estimates that by mid-October living costs of wage earners and low-salaried workers had risen 9 per cent above the level of September, 1939. The food index had advanced somewhat more rapidly than the general index, and the department reports further pronounced increases in the retail prices of various staple foods during the first half of November. Clothing costs have likewise shown a more than average advance during the past year. So far, however, the rise in living costs has lagged behind the increase in average weekly earnings of factory workers. In mid-September, for example, earnings were 20 per cent higher than a year ago, and about 27 per cent above the level prevailing when war broke out in the fall of 1939.

Generally speaking, it is evident that living costs have not yet risen to the point of justifying demands for pay increases as an offset. But the accelerated rate of the advance in living costs is a warning that the rise may, and no doubt will, soon outstrip the rise in earnings. If living costs are permitted to soar, demands for higher wages cannot be turned down, and we shall have to face the familiar inflationary spiral of mounting prices, higher wages, higher costs and still higher prices.

Envoy To Mexico

The appointment of George S. Messersmith as Ambassador to Mexico in place of Josephus Daniels brings to one of the most vital diplomatic posts in our foreign service a career man of outstanding ability. Mr. Messersmith has served the Nation with real distinction in two hemispheres. As consul general in Berlin and later as Minister to Austria he saw the rise of Hitlerism at first hand. More importantly, he realized more clearly than most observers what a danger Hitlerism represented to the free nations and peoples of the world, not least those on this side of the Atlantic. After a period as Assistant Secretary of State he has served, since January, 1940, as American Ambassador to Cuba. This post has given him an invaluable opportunity to orient himself in inter-American affairs. He has distinguished himself by his sympathetic understanding of Cuba's problems and by his unflinching devotion to American interests. His assignment to the Mexico City post is a tribute both to him and to the career service of which since 1914 he has proved so bright an ornament.

FOOLISH ARE THE YOUNG

The young man talks like the flight of birds—
Updraft, downdraft;
Aimless in the wind—
But the old man sees that the stones stand tall,
And uses them when
The air is thinned.

The young man rubs the city's wall
Ruthlessly, wildly—
And is stopped at the gate;
But the old man sees that the stones stand tall,
And pitches his tent
Outside to wait.

The young man charges with gestures grand—
But his brittle lance breaks in his hard-fisted hand,
And the wall stands strong. In his blind
chagrin
He sees not the old man walking within.

Union Regulation

Congress only is authorized to make laws by the Constitution of the United States; if a President, actually or by influence, does so, he destroys its "checks and balances," necessary to protect the people's rights and the life of democracy. He can only veto a law and Congress can pass it over his veto and it becomes the law of the Nation.

Why then does Congress dilly-dally with its plain duty? Is it lack of courage that leads it to dabble with appeasement and arbitration, both deadly, as experience shows? Unions have proved that if they fail to get what they want they kick out; if they get it, they encourage, others start their profitable strikes—an endless chain.

Unions, necessary and at first fair, have been molded by racketeering leaders into brutal gangs who impose on all classes, injure all legitimate business, levy a ruinous tax on industry and agriculture; breakers of peace, they persecute, bludgeon, kill. With "sympathetic strikes" they start a rule of terror on innocent people to accomplish their selfish ends and, with all this, go scot-free! Labor unions now are little Hitlers all over our land. Their hands have been against all, and now the hands of all are against them.

Congress has the Nation behind it, and it should act courageously, promptly and vigorously with a law that forbids all strikes till the World War ends, require unions to take out charters, account for the millions they tax and collect, and pay innocent parties for the destruction and damage they inflict.

On Carrying Out The Rent Law

The Industrial Union Council wishes to join with other civic bodies of Washington in congratulating Congress on finally passing rent-control legislation for the District. Although this act will not be as effective as the bill originally proposed by the I. U. C., it will freeze rents and should prevent rent gouging.

It has been over 15 months since the I. U. C. first adopted a resolution requesting Congress to take legislative action to control rents here. At that time and for many months subsequently the C. I. O. was told that it was presenting an alarmist point of view, that there was no danger of overcrowding or of increasing rents. The rapid march of events has proved the C. I. O. correct; the facts themselves have persuaded Congress to take this necessary action.

The most important aspect of the rent legislation today is that the Commissioners should appoint an able and impartial administrator. On him will depend the success or failure of this legislation. It seems obvious that—in addition to being a resident of the District, as required by the act—the rent administrator should be absolutely impartial. He should have no interest, direct or indirect, in the ownership or management of rental property, whether in the District or elsewhere. His attitude must be flexible, anxious to apply the spirit of the act—which is to protect tenants. He must be firm and aggressive to withstand the attacks which will undoubtedly be leveled against him by selfish operators.

The staff for assisting the administrator should include legal aides

Anti-Comintern Pact

In his column of November 26, "Ribbentrop's Circus," Barnet Never has done an excellent job of analyzing and exposing the real purposes of the Anti-Comintern Pact. "For anti-Comintern, in the Berlin pact, read antidemocratic," Mr. Never exposes brilliantly Hitler's policy of divide and rule, through the use of posing as an anti-Communist crusader.

There is a lesson for Americans in the demise of those foolish enough to believe Hitler's propaganda. Today a similar spectacle confronts us in these United States. We find that those who have loudest about the menace of Communism are those who sabotaged national defense by voting against the repeal of the Neutrality Act. They place the destruction of labor's rights before the destruction of Hitler. Thus was France immobilized, and thus will America be destroyed by its own Fifth Column.

The present emergency today speaks with one voice for an all-out policy of crushing Hitlerism. Yet there are still people who believe that antitrust legislation is more important than national defense.

The present emergency brings out in bold relief how inseparable are domestic and foreign policy. Let us not be misled by an "anti-Comintern" strategy while playing Hitler's game at home while we try to destroy him abroad.

HELEN SMITH,
Washington, Nov. 26.

Far-Sighted Formula

Recently one glimpses evidences of a shift of emphasis in the British and American war effort, an aiming at more than the annihilation of Hitler, a determination to establish a world climate in which Hitlerism will not spawn. The Churchill-Roosevelt eight-point program, although disappointing in its vagueness, was a step in this direction.

Another step we may discern in the proposal for a conference of nations, to convene now instead of after the war, to frame a code of political and economic conduct under which the postwar world may live in safety. This step may well prove a lengthy one should the delegates to the conference, shunning all counsels of vengeance, offer the benefits of this code to all peoples willing to abide by its rules, regardless of the stand of their governments in the present struggle. Contemplation by the Germans of this fair prospect, awaiting them from the moment they throw out Hitler, could not but encourage anti-Nazi feeling within Germany and stimulate revolt in the subjugated countries. With the announcement of this far-sighted formula, democracy would cease to aim at the mere frustration of a madman's dream of world dominion. As its goal of victory it would look to a world order so sane and just that future Hitlers could not find a following. Democracy's armed forces, forsaking their present dogged back-to-the-wall spirit, would acquire the zeal and striking power of crusaders.

Our War

During the recent debate in the House of Representatives preceding the vote to amend the Neutrality Act, one of the isolationist members was reported as saying: "I could not but vote to turn down the Senate amendments because they are equivalent to war-war by the back door, the back door of treachery to our people."

It so happens that we are now engaged in an undeclared war brought against us by a ruthless enemy, whether we like it or not. This may be war by the front door, the back door, or the family entrance, but it is war nevertheless.

The isolationists, by some mental perversion, seem to believe that a legislative measure has the miraculous power to protect us against attack. They have yet to find out, oddly enough, that it isn't what we say—it's what the other fellow can do, that counts.

Our Congress contains many men who talk much but think little. Or, as the Chinese say: "The full teapot makes no sound; the half-empty teapot is very noisy."

JOHN S. BARLOW,
Jersey City, N. J., Nov. 26.

Ribbentrop's Talk

The German foreign secretary talking recently to the Hitler's allies pointed out that there is no power on earth to defeat Germany and her allies. The United States is wasting time, money and effort to save Russia and England.

Only blind, naive and ignorant persons can believe this. England with her Allies, especially with America, has a three to one better chance to win the war and eradicate infected Nazism from the enslaved nations of Europe. Only our naive isolationists would like to see us bow to Hitler's arrogance and supremacy. Any man, any nation, that fights for its right, freedom and liberty deserves our recognition and support.

The Post Impressionist

"Something Old—"

"Something old and something new,
Something borrowed, something blue."

"Well, here it is, that something old—and does my child know what to do with it?" and the flute-like voice trilled with pride and laughter. And there it was—an ivory-colored cobweb—a wisp of an apron. "Long time ago," continued the mother, "over 50 years ago, my great-grandfather went to Ireland and one of the gifts he brought back to my great-grandmother was the little apron. In those days, you know, they wore them over their black silk dresses."

A Carrickmacross lace apron. "And this is the way my child will wear it—the bib will fit flat about her head, these two tabs will come in front and be looped under, and the apron part, this, with the harp and the shamrocks, will drift over her shoulders. Charming—don't you think?"

Carrickmacross lace—born of Italian guipure. Once again I stood beneath the blue skies of Italy, in the still hot air of Burano. Aeolus of the Adriatic was too drowsy with heat to blow a breath. Lazy bees, droned in the sunlight, Italian women, deep-bosomed, happy-hearted, bent dark eyes over their delicate needlework, singing songs that the women before them had sung through the centuries as they plied their needles in this fine work that added to the beauty of the world in enhancing the loveliness of women. Here on the island of Burano, not far from Venice, women are still making this fine lace, the guipure of Italy. Botticelli, that strange, shy genius, felt the appeal of its beauty and immortalized it in his paintings of those slim, spiritual women that seem to move so gracefully toward us from another world—the world of Botticelli's fancy. His pictures found their way across the mountains into France. Women of wealth, ever eager for new aids to beauty, sent couriers into Italy to bring back laces. When the young Catherine de Medici made her home in France, she encouraged all the arts of her homeland. To bask in her favor, men and women alike gloried in the magic of the needle. Vast sums were spent for lace. Some nobles, eager to keep pace with their wealthier friends, sacrificed their estates to add to their lace chests. It was a day when men ruined themselves for the airy beauty of lace.

The trade thrived—thrived to such an extent that Italy took alarm. Italian lace-makers were establishing schools in France which would take trade away from Italy, take revenue away from the state. By fair means or foul this must be stopped. Italian lace-makers must come home. The state commanded. The edict went forth—return to Italy or your relatives will be thrown into prison and kept there. You will be sought out and killed. Return, or all will be forgiven you and you will be assured of compensated services as long as you live. Some did return to Italy; others fled to England. Once again Italy became the great lace market of the world, and once again Italy smiled. Returnees prospered because of increased trade. When the great Sun King was on the throne of France, the sums that passed from France to Italy for fine laces were so great that Colbert, the financial minister, decreed that a high misdemeanor to send to Italy for laces. Lace schools were established in France under the protection of the Crown. They quickly developed until they rivaled those of Italy. Enormous sums were spent on lace. The French king's tragedy stalked abroad and scattered the pillows and the bobbins and the needles. With the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, many of the lace-makers fled to England; some settled there, others went on into Ireland.

So it was that the lace that was born of the quick fingers and happy hearts of Burano's women, the lace that had pleased best the fancy of Botticelli, the lace that had found high favor in France, came to rest at last in Carrickmacross. Once again the needles flew. The chatter of happy Irish hearts at work wove the little fairies—the pixies—drawing in the cups of flowers. Curious, they came close, closer, for they wanted the whistles in Irish ears, to touch and to send a new dance to flying Irish fingers. Thus, there crept into the lace the artistry of the grace and joy of the soul of Ireland.

Today, among the rolling hills of Maryland, in the proud domain of Sunnyside, a girl on the threshold of womanhood moves across the greensward to meet her beloved—moves from the sure protection of her parents to the uncharted love of her betrothed.

"Here comes the bride . . ."
Marianne, so young and lovely—but long ago, in the hot still air of Italy, women who loved as you loved plied flashing needles to make beauty for you this day.

Marianne, so carefree and happy, but long ago, girls like you checked the sob in their throat, stilled their trembling hands to gather little bobbins and needles for flight across the waters, where in safety they might continue to make the filmy lace such as that which today lends grace to you.

You think it is a little breeze stirring the lace about her brow?—Come close—look—see?—It is a little pixie that a moment ago sprang from that trembling blade of grass—a little pixie, grown suddenly wise and kind because of the joy and hope in the heart of a young girl—a little pixie hurrying to that Irish harp . . . listen, fairy fingers are sweeping harp strings of lace, a fairy voice sings low to the bride the song that is pulsing through the heart of the bridegroom—listen—

you hear—
Marianne, Marianne—
"Had I the heaven's embroidered cloths,
Enwrought with golden and silver light,
The blue and the dim and the dark—
Of night and light and the half-light,
I would spread the cloths under your feet;
But I being poor, have only my dreams;
I have spread my dreams under your feet;
Tread softly because you tread on my dreams."—Yeats.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Turning Point at Home

THE COUNTRY has just passed through a most difficult period, and it is very important that we should all try to realize as clearly as we can how radically different are the issues now than they were three weeks ago. The turning point was at two risks of action: the repeal of the Neutrality Act and the arrival of Mr. Kurosu.

The votes in Congress marked the end of the long controversy between the interventionists and the isolationists. In this debate the interventionists have wished to defend the Western Hemisphere at a distance by cooperating with the Allies to maintain command of the Atlantic Ocean; the isolationists have preferred to stand guard alone in this hemisphere. Since the interventionist policy called for preventive action to forestall a danger which was not yet directly upon us, the need for the action was not apparent to everyone, and therefore the risks of acting were clearer to many Americans than were the risks of not acting. Nevertheless, a considerable and growing majority of the people came to favor the interventionist policy, and in the period between the enactment of lend-lease in March and the amendment of the Neutrality Act in November the preventive policy was abandoned.

It is now in force, and there is no reason for thinking that it will need to be reconsidered or radically revised until and unless there is a radical change in the military position. If there is such a change, new decisions will have to be taken. But until and unless there is, none will need to be proposed, and so our problem now is no longer that of debating and deciding a policy but of executing it effectively. The question is not whether we shall take anticipatory measures, running risks to avert greater risks, but whether we can hold our positions or whether we shall be forced out of them. For many years, indeed until this very month, we have had the problem—always a very hard one for a democracy—of looking forward and of taking action on our own initiative. But now the problem has been divided. But now the situation is radically altered—because the fundamental decision—as to whether there is to be war or peace—depends not upon what we propose but upon what Japan decides to do.

If the negotiations fail, we shall not declare war upon Japan and attack Japan but Japan may start a war in which we shall have to fight back. The country realizes this, and that is why there is no such division of opinion as there has been over our Atlantic policy. The country understands that if war is to be avoided, it can only be by making it perfectly clear to Japan that we can retreat no further.

Thus, our Atlantic policy being completely established, is no longer a subject of controversial debate and our Pacific policy, as we can see from the absence of "isolationist" criticism, is fully supported by the Nation.

THUS there has disappeared the cause and the ground of the political disunity in the country, and the time has come when the responsible members of the opposition must examine the position and reconsider their line of action. The question is a very grave one for the Republican Party and for the country. Up to this point their opposition has, whatever their critics say about it, been a contribution to the making of national policy. But once the policy has been decided upon, it cannot be reversed and, therefore, opposition becomes illegitimate insofar as it challenges the good faith of the Government, or impairs the practical operation of the policy, or incites to disaffection and discontent at home, or gives comfort to the enemy abroad.

A failure on the part of the Republican Party to give the national policy wholehearted support, which of course includes

Newsreel From S. A.

By Carlos C. Nagel

Spotless Paramaribo

Many mothers and sweethearts, sisters and brothers of those ten thousand American men stationed today in the Dutch Guiana must be wondering what that colony, edged between the British and French Guianas, looks like. Its nearness to the ill-famed and dreaded French penal colony may not be a very tranquilizing omen; its deep tropical atmosphere may give vent to worries about illnesses.

It is strange that fate should have sent the first American troops to a region of South America which so closely resembles the popular conception of that sub-continent as featured by the ten-cent novel of adventures. In that sense the set-up is perfect: steaming heat, wild animals, thick jungle and even an assorted population from all over the globe to furnish an excellent plot.

But we forget the Dutch, the sober and industrious owners of that colony which they themselves call Surinam, four times larger than tiny Holland. The Dutch are some of the best and most efficient colonizers and they have contrived to make out of Paramaribo, the capital of Dutch Guiana, something resembling a Dutch town in a tropical setting. The place has canals, dikes, windmills and the streets are spotless, covered with gleaming white and crushed shell over which you see on Sundays the good Dutch people, in spite of the heat, dressed in black, riding their bicycles to the Protestant church.

It is curious to note that American troops are helping to protect a colony which once belonged to Great Britain and which came under Dutch possession after shrewd deals by means of which in 1867 they ceded to the British the rather well-known Dutch of Manhattan and for which the Dutch had paid the Indians the legendary pieces of cloth and glass beads. The British lost Manhattan Island together with a good deal more of what today is the United States, but the Dutch are hanging on to Guiana with American aid.

More than one boy from New York City has a chance now to see what the Dutch received for their home town. With all the excitement Broadway has to offer today it cannot be compared with an excursion to the interior of Dutch Guiana, for Paramaribo is really only a spot of civilization surrounded by some cultivated land and then many miles of wild country hiding enormous wealth. A railroad connects the capital with the goldfields of Dutch Guiana, and that is about all the transportation facilities the colony has to offer to those who may hesitate to use the many rivers to visit the hinterland.

These probably will be little need for American troops to enter the interior of Dutch Guiana, since the coast, together with the French Guiana and Brazilian border, is the vital area, protected now by Brazilian troops.

THE UNTIMELY DEATH of Don Pedro Aguirre Cerda, President of Chile, has led to many and diverse conjectures as to how and when his successor will be elected. The constitution of Chile is very explicit on the matter: The vice president, who has been in charge of affairs until and since the President's death, is required by law to hold elections within 70 days after the demise of the President of the government. These elections are held in the usual manner as contemplated by law and the chosen candidate fulfills the unexpired term, that is, until 1946.

The Popular Front, the most representative and powerful combination of parties in Chile today, is composed of the Radical, Radical Socialist, Democratic, Socialist and Communist Parties.

It is the feeling in Chile that the late President Aguirre Cerda, backed by these parties, has done well during difficult times and will be replaced by one of his close co-operators and a representative leader of the Popular Front.

"Don Tinto," as the President was called with loving respect by those who placed him in the presidency, was a highly popular leader who became an idol during the disastrous earthquake which destroyed a good part of southern Chile and killed over 25,000 people in 1939. He was one of the first to reach the region from Santiago and personally took charge of immediate relief. He was untiring in his efforts to cooperate and he was seen, for days, afterward, walking or riding through the destroyed cities and towns, without sleep, unshaven, utterly shaken by the disaster that befell the people of Chile.

Although Don Pedro had been in the United States and had learned to like and admire the American people, it probably was during that catastrophe that he developed a strong admiration for the United States and its President. It must be remembered that this country expressed its sympathies toward the stricken nation with practical, highly valuable aid which did much to reduce the suffering and prevent disease. Outside of the great help of the neighbor countries of Chile, the President, Aguirre Cerda, was deeply moved by the joint help of the two great democracies—Great Britain and the United States. This country sent large Army planes with medicines, whereas Great Britain, with several battleships in Chilean waters at the time, placed them at the disposal of the President for the transportation of wounded, doctors and nurses.

When President Franklin Roosevelt commented on the death of President Aguirre Cerda, during a recent press conference, he was speaking of a man who was a good friend of his.

Telephone Talk About Joe Fay

Watkins 9-5808.
Garment Workers?
Let me talk to Dave Dubinsky. He is President. This is Pegler. You know, Bill Green's friend. I got news for you. I ought to charge you dough for this. Your pal Joe Fay just got indicted up in Syracuse, for assault, second. Misdemeanor nothing. It's a felony now for five years. Stop laughing, will you? How can I tell you about it with you roaring like that?

Well, it seems he socked this guy at the A. F. L. convention in New Orleans last year when you offered the resolution to kick the hoodlums out of the union leadership and the work is a personal affront. The guy's name is H. Orville Warner and he was business agent of a couple of Rochester locals of the International Union of Operating Engineers. Well, on August 20, when the A. F. L. was holding its State convention in Syracuse, Warner went into the meeting of the engineers and Fay, being one of the international V-P's, was in the chair and this Warner wanted Fay's help against some companies that were mining nonunion gravel for a defense job and Fay gave him the rough side of his tongue, so Warner walked out of the room to cool off.

SO your hoodlum pal followed him out and popped him and Warner's story is that he socked him from behind, or anyway, one of his famous sneak punches that he is always throwing at guys with their hands in their pockets. So down goes Warner and they say Fay then gives him the shoe in the face. I have got two doctors' reports here on my desk. They say "fracture of the right maxilla."

Well, Warner seems to be a stand-up guy, so, when they tried to square it he said nothing doing, and when they threatened him if he wouldn't withdraw his complaint, he got a police sergeant to write him up in court and they don't stand for any monkey business by outside talent. He has got a lawyer friend named Ray Fowler in Rochester, who just knocked out a gorilla, so Fowler takes an interest in the case and Jesse Cantor, an assistant D. A. in Syracuse, gives it to the Onondaga grand jury and they vote a bill. And so Thursday night, Warner up in court and pleaded not guilty and put up $1000 in $100 bills, but he has got to go back after the first of the year and they are going to level on him. No fix.

FOWLER says Warner went through hell. One operation lasted two hours and they had to keep him under anesthetic all day so they could drain the blood from his throat.

Drama In Wartime

By J. B. Priestley

Entertaining Part Of War Effort

Another in a series by the famous British novelist, essayist and playwright.

London (By Wireles). BEFORE THE WAR most of my time and energy were spent in the world of entertainment. I was a very successful dramatist. I had my own producing company and I was also director of the London Repertory Theatre. I was also interested in film. What has happened to that side of my life?

Well, at present, a new comedy of mine (a satire on broadcast-ing, not a war play) called "Goodnight, Children," is touring before it opens in London; a film whose original story I wrote, called "The Foreman Went to France," a war film, has just been made; and another film based on my novel, "Let the People Sing," is nearing completion. So obviously I have not said goodbye to that side of my life.

But let it be freely admitted that the difficulties are enormous, and far more formidable than they ought to be. A people engaged in total war must have entertainment. Everybody is agreed about that. It is urgently necessary to relieve the strain. But while the principle is accepted, not very much is done to help entertainment and much is done to hinder it.

FOR SOLDIERS and airmen and many of the people in war factories, a large organization called after its initials in modern fashion, Ensa, provides entertainment sending plays, revues and concert parties, or, if necessary, troupes consisting of two or three entertainers, around the country. Its headquarters at the Drury Lane Theatre, where it functions under the able direction of an old theatrical colleague of mine, Mr. Basil Dean, resemble a kind of high-speed, mass-production entertainment factory. It employs thousands of people, including at times stage stars who work for little more than bare expenses.

Then there is a smaller and more highbrow organization called, again after its original initials, Coma, which sends out a few touring companies doing serious drama, many musicians to give concerts in small towns and villages and some exhibitions of art. This is an excellent thing, but at present it has not enough money to play with and it is much too small to be a real force. For the rest, entertainment receives no official assistance and is, of course, greatly hampered by wartime conditions. Indeed, in this respect we are probably much worse off than our American states like Russia and Germany.

Payroll Tax Held Likely

Parley Planned

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt will call Treasury experts and Congressional leaders to a White House conference, probably next week, to seek an agreement on the substance of proposed new tax legislation.

Plans for the meetings were disclosed yesterday by Chairman George (Democrat), of Georgia, of the Senate Finance Committee, who told reporters he expected any new revenue program to provide for a payroll withholding tax.

George expressed the opinion that consideration of a new revenue measure was likely to be delayed until January, despite urgent Treasury appeals for speedy action.

While the Georgia Senator would not predict the form to be taken by the new bill, he said he looked upon the inclusion of a payroll withholding tax as "inevitable," and believed that it might be accompanied by a general all-round increase in corporate and individual levies.

THE TREASURY has suggested several types of withholding taxes as measures to forestall threats of inflation, including an increase in the present Social Security levies. But Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, made it clear that there would be strong opposition to the latter proposal.

"If we are going to have a payroll tax," Taft declared, "let's make it an out-and-out tax and not disguise it as a Social Security levy."

The Ohio Senator said he had little patience with the theory that withholding a portion of the pay of all salaried workers would prove an effective brake against inflation, remarking that it would entail hardships for the 70 per cent of workers he said had received no increases despite the industrial boom created by the defense program.

WHILE THE Treasury has suggested a payroll tax of 15 per cent, Taft, a Finance Committee member, said he thought 5 per cent should be the limit, with some equalizing concessions made on the regular income levies.

"The tax ought not to be discriminatory against those in the lower brackets," he declared. "Even if we put a 5 per cent levy on payrolls, that is going to force the man who gets $30 a week and now pays about $60 a year income tax to pay an additional $75."

"That would be asking too much. The additional levy ought to be compensated by a reduction in the regular income tax or all of the tax collected through a payroll levy, if that is the more economical way."

Albert Barnes, chairman of the Ministers and Deacons Welfare Association, a former slave, man of many memories about America's slavery of 40 years ago and with a great feeling for charity, went around with his slip of paper again yesterday because Christmas is approaching.

For the association he was asking: "Our friends to help us with Christmas baskets for the destitute old colored men and women and little children. All donations of cash, food or clothing will be greatly appreciated. Send all donations to headquarters, 2315 Sherman Avenue Northwest."

The old man was given $60 a month on his retirement as a waiter and committee room handy man at the Capitol six years ago and often he uses it to help destitute people along his friends say of him. He has gone from door to door collecting food and clothing for them.

serve both as inspiration and relaxation is an essential part of the war effort and should be officially regarded and treated as such. This means it should be the business of a wartime government not to put obstacles in the way of entertainment but to try to help us entertainers carry on with our essential tasks. But whether the help is forthcoming or not we will carry on.

A PLAY may go, as a play of mine did recently, to a city that happens to have just one of its places of amusement hit by a bomb. The natural result is that the people of that city do not feel like crowding their theaters and picture palaces for the next few weeks (our people are anything but cautious, but there's a limit to recklessness) so your play takes a quarter of what it would normally take. And we have to allow for these risks.

Travel is not easy and sometimes it is hard to find good accommodations for touring actors and musicians. Their life is no joke, and I for one have nothing but admiration for their gallant spirit. Many of our best performers have done a magnificent job during these last 18 months and deserve more official recognition and credit than comes their way.

THERE IS, however, another and better reward and this does come their way. That is the keen appreciation and enthusiasm of our wartime audiences. The people do enjoy what is offered them and this in spite of the fact that most of them are working much longer than before the war and naturally find traveling to and from places of amusement through the blackout a not very pleasant business. It is a privilege to do one's best to amuse such people.

I still believe, however, that I have said publicly more than once, even before the bombing began, namely, that provision of good entertainment which can

The Gallup Poll

Interest in Religion Seen Increasing More In Cities Than in Agricultural Areas

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

This is the first of a series of two articles reporting public opinion on religion and the churches, particularly in relation to war.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 28.—Has interest in religion been increasing since the war began?

A stock-taking survey conducted by the Institute among church members and nonmembers from coast to coast indicates that while only a small proportion of country and small-town people think interest in religion is increasing, a much larger proportion of city dwellers think so.

Those who hold this belief explain it on the ground that "trouble makes people turn more to religion."

The Institute survey was conducted on the following issue: Throughout the Nation, approximately one person in every three, on the average, replied that religious interest was increasing. The national result, and the difference between country and city dwellers, is shown below:

	Yes	No	Don't Know
Farmers.....	22%	68%	12%
Towns Under 10,000 Population.....	27	60	13
Towns and Cities Over 10,000 Population.....	37	52	11
National.....	31	57	12

An Institute survey conducted on a similar question two years ago likewise found differences between the opinion of city and farm. While approximately one-fourth of farmers interviewed thought interest in religion had not increased during the preceding few years, approximately two-fifths of city voters felt that it had.

There is, however, no widespread feeling today that young people are more interested in religion than young people were ten years ago. In fact, the Institute survey found that the largest number of persons polled think the younger generation is less interested in religion than the youngsters were a decade ago. This is revealed in the following poll:

"Do you think young people in this community are more interested, or less interested in religion now than young people ten years ago?"

More Interested.....18%
Less Interested.....49%
About the Same.....24%
Don't Know.....9%

Public Opinion Poll Started in Canada

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 28.—In probably the most impressive news collaboration in Canada since the formation of the Canadian press service, 27 leading newspapers in the Dominion are uniting this week to sponsor public opinion surveys by the Gallup Poll of Canada.

The formation of this poll, which is to be called the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion, marks the extension to the fourth major democratic country of the Gallup method for continuous public opinion measurement. Such polls are already operating in Britain and in Australia as well as in the United States.

The Canadian Institute will report today in 27 leading Canadian newspapers who are sponsoring the public opinion survey project the following results:

"In your opinion, what is the most important problem the Canadian government must solve in the next few months?"

Conscription of manpower and wealth.....35%
Increased war effort; how to increase production and win the war.....23%

Financial measures, including price control, inflation, taxes.....15%

Problems related to labor and employment, including defense strikes.....5%

Farm problems.....4%
Post war reconstruction.....4%
All others.....13%

Maryland Bombers In Libyan Battle

OFF ON BOMBING MISSION—Heavy Maryland bombers, built at the Middle River, Md., factory of Glenn L. Martin, speed away to attack Axis targets in Libya. British yesterday reported heavy bombing of Axis docks at Bengasi and supply lines to the Rezegh battle front (see map below)

SUPPLY LINES—British bombers yesterday hammered at Axis supply lines (dotted) linking Bengasi with Rezegh (1), where British claimed to have made a supply link between Egypt and Tobruk. Rome said an Axis force had taken Sidi Omar (2) but British said this unit had been cut up into roving bands. British thrust, last reported at Augila, presumably was advancing toward El Agheila

Romance—Film Actress Astrid Allwyn and Charles Fee, West Coast executive of a Boston insurance firm, will be married tomorrow in Las Vegas, Nev. They met for the first time when Fee returned a book he had borrowed from Miss Allwyn's sister, his neighbor. The actress is the former wife of Actor Robert Kent

Say When—Actor-Producer Orson Welles and Screen Actress Dolores Del Rio say they'll wed shortly after her divorce becomes final January 18. They've been together so frequently their friends' only question was "what's the date?" Miss Del Rio obtained an interlocutory decree from Cedric Gibbons, movie art director, last January. Welles was divorced two years ago from former Virginia Nicholson, Chicago

TANK TANGLES WITH INFANTRYMEN—In a mighty embarrassing position is this light tank. Posing as a much heavier medium tank of an armored division fighting with the Red forces, the smaller vehicle roared point-blank into a 37-mm. antitank gun fired by victorious Blue troops of Fort Meade's Twenty-ninth Division. The action was near Monroe, N. C., as First Army and Fourth Corps forces met in mimic battle. The Blues won and maneuver "armistice" was effected yesterday

Carolina War Games End; First Army 'Blues' Win

By Marshall Andrews

Post Staff Writer

Albemarle, N. C., Nov. 28 (With First Army in the Field). The battle of the Carolinas ended today with the Red Fourth Corps fighting stubbornly to hold off an overwhelming force of Blue divisions that swarmed upon it from all sides.

At 4:30 p. m. word went out from GHQ director headquarters to tired troops to lay down their arms and celebrate, if they liked, to their hearts' content. By radio and telephone, by messengers on motorcycles and in jeeps, the message was flashed to men locked in battle in the front lines, to men creeping in little patrols through the tangled underbrush, to soldiers in tanks blasting their way through the deep waves of antitank guns between themselves and home. Long convoys boring through the thick brown dust were halted by artillery fire marking trucks and told to halt in place. Generals and privates alike brought signs of relief up from their toes and exuberant souls cut loose with their rifles to make it plain what they thought of the news.

After a fashion it was a repetition of November, 1918, when the United States celebrated the Armistice a week too soon. Last Wednesday, rumors of an armistice got round among the troops—spread, it was reported, by tank soldiers who drew off from attack shouting, "The war's over." One division at that time fired off almost all its ammunition in celebration and Red-Blue parties were held in town all along the line.

Obviously, the battle was ended today because there was nothing to be gained by carrying it on. As a matter of fact, it was ended to all practical purposes last night, with Fourth Corps fighting a desperate defensive action, Blue First Army closing in from all sides, Red aviation grounded and the Catawba River bridges destroyed in its rear.

The advantage gained yesterday, when the Twenty-ninth and Forty-fourth Divisions contained the Red armored force in their fronts all day long, was pressed to the limit today by Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commanding First Army. His First Division, which last night reached Lancaster, S. C., well in the Red rear, had turned eastward and had collided with the two Red armored divisions and the Fourth Motorized Division. Hammered to the breaking point by these powerful fighting units, First Division called for help.

It was not slow in coming. The Fifty-eighth Brigade (Maryland) was detached from the Twenty-ninth and sent posting down to Lancaster in trucks. The Twenty-sixth Division, originally ordered to turn eastward and move along the left flank of the First, was sent straight south to strike the armored force in flank. The Ninth Division, in Army reserve, was sent up and around by Monroe, N. C., to drive southward to Lancaster and oppose the First Division.

Farther down the line, First Corps drove westward and northward, pressing back the Red Forty-third Division, its Thirtieth and Eighth Divisions hammering toward the Red south flank. Elements of the Eighth were reported in Kershaw, S. C., on the Catawba. Maj. Gen. O. W. Griswold's Fourth Corps lay behind its prepared defenses, fighting four ways at once against pressure that was building up by the minute. Its fight was stubborn and gallant but hopeless. Its tankers and armored infantry, aggressive since Monday, were all but asleep on their feet; its infantry, fighting all week against odds of two to one, was dizzy with exhaustion. Yet, when the battle ended, the Army still manned its first defensive lines and tanks were pounding the First Division without mercy.

The 300,000 troops of both armies will return to their base camps wise in war. They have had a workout never before granted an American Army in peacetime.

Don't 'Store' Vegetables, Eat Them Up

This is one of a series of articles on how to maintain good nutrition at small cost.

By Ida Jean Kain

WHEN IT comes to being a good cook, the home maker has the dietitian beat seven days out of the week. The dietitian has all the right theories, but you home makers are the ones who get the practice. Even so, you have to look to the expert on nutrition for ways and means of cooking to save the vitamins.

After you go to the trouble of planning and marketing for the foods that will protect your family's health, you certainly do not want to waste their vital elements in the kitchen. How many of these elements reach the table safely depends to a great extent on your methods of preparing and cooking.

Vegetables shouldn't be kept. They should be cooked and eaten right away. But when it is necessary to store them, put them away in a cold place. Green beans and peas rapidly lose their vitamin value at room temperature. And spinach and other greens that are allowed to stand at room temperature for a few days lose about half their Vitamin C. Kept at 30 degrees Fahrenheit for the same length of time, almost the original value is retained.

Use Little Water

Try to follow recipes which allow for cooking whole and without peeling. When water is used, it should be the smallest quantity possible and they should be cooked quickly in a covered utensil. The liquid should be served with the vegetable or used in soups and broths. Water left clinging to green leafy vegetables after the final rinse is sufficient for cooking. When you prepare meat for cooking, wipe it carefully with a damp cloth. Never wash the meat off.

Soda hastens the vitamin and mineral destruction and should not be added to any vegetable. Aids, such as vinegar and lemon juice, help to conserve the vitamins. Since vitamins are greatly affected by oxidation, you should not stir air into food while cooking or put food through a sieve while it is still hot.

Steaming is an excellent method of cooking and there are any number of steam and pressure cookers on the market. These come in all sizes and all prices. Frying destroys the vitamins and is a method that should not be used often. Nor should food set on the stove and simmer away or overcook. Vegetables should be cooked only until tender. Overcooking spoils the color, ruins the flavor and destroys the vitamins.

Canned and Frozen Foods

When you heat canned tomatoes, heat only the quantity you intend to use and do not boil or simmer. The same rule applies to any other canned vegetables, and, as with those freshly cooked, their liquid is rich in vitamins and minerals and should be used.

Frozen foods that are to be cooked should not be defrosted beforehand and those to be eaten raw should be served immediately on defrosting. Otherwise, part of their vitamin content is needlessly lost.

In preparing fruit juice, the ideal plan is to wait and squeeze just before serving. If you do prepare it the night before, place in a tightly covered container and keep in the refrigerator. Fruit and vegetable salads should always be prepared just before serving.

Easy-to-Keep 'Defense Coiffure'

An advocate of individuality, Mrs. Burnet F. Maybank, wife of the newly elected South Carolina Senator, chooses a simple, easy to keep coiffure for the "duration." Her side hair (shown below) is swept upward and backward to form a soft frame for her face. A swish of the comb quickly converts the modified pompadour over forehead (as at left) into a daytime or evening arrangement. Eileen Desmond, local hair stylist, designed the hair-do.

Family Life May Be Promoted By Attractive Game Room

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

BOTH THE SEASON and the times presage many long home evenings ahead during the coming months. In winter we naturally stick closer to the home fold at night. And this winter, in particular, with the world practically collapsing at our feet, we will have less desire than usual to roam afield for entertainment.

And so—tucking the house in for this winter includes more than the usual attention to home entertainment. Reading, of course, is the first love of the stay-at-homers . . . that calls for easy chairs with good light in reading radius. Radio is popular too . . . how is your old set? Maybe this is the season to trade it in on something more ambitious with a good photograph attached for those fine records you've collected. Make sure that the radio is placed so that the listener doesn't have to go across the room to turn it off and on . . . an easy chair in reach is pretty nice . . . a good lamp nearby is important too.

Games are a sociable way to spend family evenings. They call for the right sort of table and chairs for a sit-down game . . . staunch folding models if you don't have room for a permanent set-up. But if you can possibly arrange it, a permanent table is the thing; there are many smart ones in maple, mahogany and walnut that will add distinguished variation to the arrangement of your living room. If your family is seriously game-minded, you'll have to do something about a ping-pong or billiard table.

What about that rarely used sun parlor that's gotten to be a catch-all? Couldn't it be pressed into use as a family game room? If you don't want it to seem too casual or impudent in furnishing, placed as it is right there opening into the living room, then plan the decoration to harmonize with the adjoining rooms—they can still be gay and gamey. A monotone color scheme is especially effective for this sort of room. Select one color that is used in the adjoining room and have the whole game room one in this color.

Suppose green is the color you choose . . . have a plain green walled linoleum floor, light green walls and woodwork, green salen or homespun curtains made to pull back and forth on rings, furniture painted or upholstered in green. Since it's a sun room and very light anyway, the green won't need anything to pick it up. But if you want a contrast, introduce it in accessories of bright yellow or of deep red.

If you have a regular game room upstairs, downstairs or on the main floor of the house (maybe made by inclosing that rarely used old back porch), nothing is nicer than knotty pine panelling and a bare wood floor with perhaps a few Indian scatter rugs.

Mrs. Maybank Advises Short, Fluffy Hairdo

This is the second in a series of defense coiffures that the Beauty Editor will present from time to time.

By Carolyn Abbott

EVEN if patrician featured Mrs. Burnet F. Maybank, wife of the newly elected Senator from South Carolina, liked fancy hair-dos (and she doesn't), she's far too busy with official and defense activities to try one.

As wife of the former Mayor of Charleston and mistress of the Governor's Mansion in Columbia, South Carolina—the latter which she recently renounced to become a Senate wife here—she quickly learned that an easy to keep coiffure is necessary for a busy woman. And since coming to Washington, she's adopted an even simpler style for her soft, ash blonde hair.

Mrs. Maybank prefers an adaptable coiffure. For example, she likes one that looks glamorous by night but can quickly be combed into a becoming daytime style.

Prefers Upsweep For Evening Wear

"For evening," she explained, "I have started having my hair dressed higher and for the first time I show my ears. The present style demands some form of upsweep—especially for evening, as it gives dignity and style."

"I never care for a severe head-dress," she said, "or an overly fussy one. Hair is an important feature in a girl or woman. I like young girls to have simple, well-brushed, shiny hair. Too many women still fail to brush their hair thoroughly these days. They hold to the outmoded idea that brushing spoils a wave or permanent."

"It is wise to change the hair-do occasionally. I know women who say, 'I wish I could arrange my hair some other way, but I just can't.' These are in a rut and should be pushed out." But, Mrs. Maybank cautioned, never sacrifice becomingness for style—you can always find some way that combines both.

Likes Hair Fluffy In the Summer

In the summer, Mrs. Maybank likes her hair as long and fluffy and simple as possible. Sometimes she shampoos her own hair and dries it in the sun. Yet come winter—she cuts it shorter. "My hair is soft and fine," she said, "and stays in place better when short." Eileen Desmond, local hair-stylist, who designed Mrs. Maybank's defense coiffure, said, "I coiff her hair in a soft, natural manner so that it will be easy to keep. Also, I keep it simple and fluffy to harmonize with her natural, unassuming personality and soft features."

Lamp Chimneys Stage Comeback

Lamp chimneys, which seemed destined to become part of the vanishing scene after gas and electricity provided our illumination, are once more becoming familiar household articles. This is due not to a reversion to the old-fashioned incandescent lamp, but to the current vogue for twin hurricane lamps on the fireplace, or as part of informal table settings.

Autumn Tea at Maryland University

OUT at Maryland University where social life is conducted with great simplicity but also with much social propriety, there was a flutter of excitement when the Omicron Nu, honorary home economics sorority, gave a tea with Miss Eloise Davison, assistant director, Civilian Defense, as honor guest.

College girls of today are blessed with more modern cooking equipment, but they take a leaf from their grandmothers' etiquette book, and also carry on with the social graces. Home economics students drifted through the tea room with grace and beauty serving their guests.

The Maryland Room in the Home Economics Building was charmingly decorated with autumn foliage and berries. The two long tea tables, where graduate students poured tea, were enhanced with exquisite tea cloths, gleaming silver service, pastel colored china, a centerpiece of yellow, white and rust chrysanthemums and white tapers.

But this was an occasion "where more is meant than meets the eye." The girls had planned the food, too, with an eye for flavor as well as beauty. Here is the tea menu:

Carrot Sticks Olives
Chocolate Filled Pastries
Tiny Decorated Cup Cakes
Toll House Cookies
Mints Assorted Nuts
Tea Coffee

Toll House Cookies are worthy of being served at any tea party. They are flavoured, crisp morsels, liked by most everyone. Here is the recipe by which the Maryland University girls made these cookies for their tea:

Toll House Cookies—Cream 1 cup butter, add ¾ cup brown sugar, ¾ cup granulated sugar and 2 eggs beaten whole. Dissolve 1 teaspoon soda in 1 teaspoon hot water and mix alternately with 2½ cups flour sifted with 1 teaspoon salt. Lastly add 1 cup chopped nuts and 2 economy size bars (7 ounces each) of semisweet chocolate which has been cut in pieces the size of a pea. Flavor with 1 teaspoon vanilla and drop by half teaspoonfuls on a greased cookie sheet. Bake 10 to 12 minutes in 375-degree oven. Makes 100 cookies.

Do not melt chocolate. Cut along the scores, pieces are the proper size. Chocolate cuts easily at room temperature.

Citing Six Pamphlets That Tell 'How to Spend,' Reader Calls It Housewife's Patriotic Duty Today To Conserve Nation's Health by Serving Good Food

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I would like to make a few additions to your excellent reply of November 26 to "Bob," the young man whose financially irresponsible bride is keeping him broke, buying hats and shoes. In line with your suggestion that he study pamphlets on budgeting, I recommend the October 15 and December 1 issues of the Consumers' Guide, published by the United States Department of Agriculture.

These back issues can be had for 5 cents; but he can place his name on the mailing list and receive future copies free of charge. There are two "marketing lists" in the October number,—both of which name different foods that give a family the "diet defense" it should have; and, also, suggests the amount of such foods each member of the family should have. One is a "low cost" marketing list, and the other is more liberal. The December 1 issue carries a chart, for "posting" your meals, in order to check them against scientific nutritional standards,—this eliminating guesswork in feeding the family intelligently. Even a child could work out a well-balanced, economical diet for a family by studying this chart!

Publication No. 183, called "Food Budgets for Nutrition and Production Programs," lists the kind and quantity of nutrition required by the individual, according to his age and activity. However, this is a rather complicated treatise; and much the same information is conveyed by The Washington Post's Home Institute booklet, entitled "Change Your Weight for Beauty's Sake." This booklet lists caloric contents of many foods, and even a novice at cooking should be able to plan "body building menus" by following its instruction. And have fun doing it!

Two additional bulletins I would recommend are No. 1757, entitled, "Diets to Fit the Family Income," and No. 1553, entitled, "Planning and Recording Family Expenditures." All of these are for sale by the superintendent of documents, Department of Agriculture, at 5 cents per copy.

And for one last suggestion: The American Red Cross is continually giving courses in nutrition, home nursing and first-aid—most of them free of charge. I hope "Bob" will strongly urge his bride to take these courses now, before she has babies to tie her down. Wives, mothers and homemakers are the backbone of America today, as never before—and their first contribution to our "national defense" program must consist in building and safeguarding the health of our citizens.

Advice Given Bridegroom

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I happen to be one of your many readers, and it also happens that I am employed in an executive capacity with a well-known firm in Washington. I thought it might interest you to know that your column of November 28—dealing with a bridegroom's wedding over his bride's spendthrift habits—was placed on my desk by one of our district managers, with the following comment:

"Here is something that ought to be compulsory reading for every young man who comes into our organization. Look it over and please return,—as I would like to have my daughters read it. It contains some real facts of life."

I wish to compliment you on the sound approach you have made to this young man's problem. I sincerely hope your recommendation to him—to finance his marriage on a budget plan hereafter—will be taken to heart by all young couples. Cordially yours, R. S. B.

Seeks Book Entitled, 'How to Get Your Man'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Well over a year ago you wrote an article on husband-hunting, in which you gave the name of a book (and its author), something like this: "How to Get Your Man." I would appreciate your kindness in stating the book title again. It occurs to me I may have the name wrong, as I have been unable to locate the book in any local store. Sincerely, J. M. P.

It's Been Written—Under Another Name

DEAR J. M. P.: I imagine the book you have in mind is "John the Reckless," "The Way to His Heart," published (as I recall) by Bobbs-Merrill Co. I have referred to this book several times. Your life magazine carried its contents in "digest" form; and Malvina Lindsay reviewed it in her column, "The Gentler Sex," on this page, about two years ago. M. H.

Fashion Forum

When to Go Veiled

TO WEAR or not to wear a veil over the face after 6 o'clock is a question that has come to the Fashion Editor from a middle-aged matron. She writes that she has seen many veils worn after 6 o'clock, but has been told that they are frowned upon in social gatherings or public places.

Although custom still decrees that veils over the face are not appropriate after 6 o'clock, good grooming rather than the propriety rules the decision. It is never considered ladylike to fuss with one's clothes in public. If a woman wears a long veil over her face, she usually has to throw it back to dine. Then she has to adjust it and usually assumes that ill-attractiveness look.

It is suggested that since long veils are not high style fashion this season, they might easily be dispensed with. Veils are now an integral part of the hat. They should be worn around the chapeau and fit into the hair arrangement. Veils are meant to glorify the hat. They are part of it and are put on by the designer to conform to the shape of the hat. If a woman completes her toilet at home, arranging hair, hat and veil before she starts out, she will appear well "turned out."

Lisle or Silk Hose?

A BUSINESS woman who bought a few pairs of silk hose during the recent rush writes that her supply is about to give out. She is considering stocking up on lisle hose and asks these questions: Are the lisle warmer for winter? Are they sheer looking? Are they less expensive than silk? Will they wear better than silk or nylon?

While the stores are now selling more lisle hose than they have in recent years, here are the pros and cons concerning the status of such hose. Lisle hose are warmer than either nylon or silk, but they will not wear any better because they do not have as much tensile strength. Many women do like them for their warmth, however, since nylons have a tendency to feel cool on some wearers. The streamlined lisle hose are sheer looking.

One hosiery buyer says that she has in stock just as many pairs of silk, nylon and lisle stockings as she has ever had. She suggests that a woman live a normal life, as far as hose are concerned. If she likes lisle hosiery for tweeds and sport clothes, she should wear them. For silks and rayon crepes, nylon and silk stockings are considered a little more appropriate.

Although the nylon supply has been curtailed a bit, there are still all-nylon hose. Many have cotton and rayon tops, however. To insure longer wear it is wise to be certain the entire stocking is thoroughly dry before putting it on. Nylon dries quickly, but rayon takes a longer time, and garters are likely to poke a hole right through the hose top. There also are combinations of silk and rayon that require similar precaution. "Silk and wool"

Right for evening or daytime wear is the veil that only partially covers the face.

Right for daytime, but not after 6, is the veiled fur felt chapeau (above) worn by Actress Alexis Smith hose (liked especially by the older woman) need slightly less care in washing and drying.

Good Form in Derbies

FROM the male angle, a young fellow wants to know if it is permissible to wear a derby after 6 o'clock at night with dinner attire. He recently asked for a derby in a store and was told he should wear a Homburg.

The furnishings buyer of an exclusive men's store says that for dinner, soft black snap brim hats, Homburgs or collapsible opera hats are considered the correct attire. A derby is strictly a street or business hat and should not be worn after 6 o'clock—unless, of course, the man is wearing street clothes. With full dress the silk hat and opera hat are considered suitable.

Miss Marian Hamilton Is Presented To Capital Society at Charming Tea

Old Line Leaders Turn Out en Masse To Welcome Bud

By Patricia Grady

Residential Washington turned out en masse yesterday afternoon to welcome Miss Marian Hamilton to its ranks when the tall, blond daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Hamilton, Jr., was presented to old-line Capital society at a tea in the Wyoming Avenue home of her parents.

Wearing a cream-colored silk gown with delicate designs of gold thread, the bracelet-length sleeves turned back into a tailored cuff, the torso-bodice falling into a full, gathered skirt, the bud received with her mother at the entrance to the chrysanthemum-filled living room. Carrying out the yellow and white color scheme, Miss Hamilton, wearing an heirloom pearl clip given her by her grandmother, Mrs. George Hamilton, sr., carried a bouquet of white and gold orchids. Her mother had chosen a wine velvet frock with a gathered bodice, a V neckline, long tight sleeves and a flowing skirt, and Mrs. George Hamilton, sr., who was assisting, wore a floor-length dress of black lace made on simple lines.

Ten Girls Assist Deb

Assisting at the lace-covered table, centered with white candles in yellow glass candlesticks and a low yellow bowl of yellow and white chrysanthemums, were Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Daniel Devore, Mrs. Harry Covington, Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton, Mrs. Max Kauffmann, Mrs. Ashmead Fuller, Mrs. Mildred Merrick, Mrs. John Hamilton, Mrs. Mac Hamilton, Mrs. Victor Alfaro, Mrs. Lawrence Green, Mrs. Samuel Kauffmann and Mrs. William F. Thompson.

Debs of the season who were on hand to assist the hostess were Miss Isabella Hagner, Miss Ruth Hurley, Miss Margaret Hill, Miss Carol Franklin, Miss Dorothy Drayton, Miss Jessie Kaufmann and Miss Delphine Colquitt, who made her debut on Thursday. Also assisting were Miss Thelma Repetti, of Colorado Springs, and Miss Joan Webber, of Long Island, who are house guests of the Hamiltons, and Miss Louise Hamilton, the young sister of the debutante.

Dinner-Dance At Shoreham

Following the tea, Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton fete the debutante at a dinner at the Shoreham. Guests were the "young set" assistants at the afternoon party and their escorts, Frank Holcomb, Hobart Chatfield-Taylor, Pat Malloy, Walter Cummings, Harry Hoskinson, Bruce McLaughlin, Robert Fleming, Frank Rounds, Harold Morgan, James McCord, Peter Ansberry, James McCaw Parrish, Bob Parsons, Elihu Root, Macdonald Goodwin and Horton Schockoff.

The debutante, whose family is synonymous with residential Capital society, attended Potomac School and Georgetown Convent before enrolling at Norton-on-the-Sound in Connecticut, from which she graduated last June. A swimming and tennis enthusiast, she is now concentrating her efforts on piano lessons and the social whirl. After Christmas, she expects to take a secretarial course.

Among the many parties planned for Miss Hamilton is the ball to be given at the Sulgrave Club next Saturday by her aunt, Mrs. Mae Hamilton. Mr. and Mrs. George Hamilton, sr., grandparents of the debutante, will give a ball in her honor at "Stone Ridge," their home in Bethesda, Md., December 27.

Gay Dinner Parties Precede Friday Evening Club Dance

Several dinner parties preceded the Friday Evening Supper Club dance last night at the Sulgrave Club. Mrs. John R. Williams was hostess at a small party, having as one of her guests her daughter, Mrs. Frederick Sterling, who only arrived in town yesterday. Mrs. Sterling, who will spend the season here, has been at her home in Newport, R. I.

The ballroom of the club presented an especially festive appearance with its decorations of palms and masses of yellow and bronze autumn chrysanthemums.

Hoskines Mix Housewarming With Cocktails

Bronze and yellow chrysanthemums blended with the blue-green upholstery and orange drapery of Mr. and Mrs. Harold B. Hoskines' little house on O Street, when they entertained at cocktails yesterday. The party was really a housewarming for their new home, into which they moved only recently. It is "but a wee house" as Mrs. Hoskines explained, and the number of guests therefore was limited.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoskines have been in Washington only about six months—he is with the State Department. With almost Indian summer temperatures outside, Mrs. Hoskines chose a simple afternoon dress for her party yesterday.

Three Labor Bills Progress In Congress

The Labor Committee compromise, which they oppose.

Provides the wide-open Vinson rule: "It shall be in order to consider without the intervention of any point of order any matter which relates to labor disputes and conditions in national defense."

Under that arrangement, not the Labor Committee but the House Naval Committee and its chairman, Vinson, would manage the labor legislation through the House and in conference with the Senate.

Seeks Leadership Agreement

Vinson last night was reported seeking a leadership agreement which would permit House consideration of at least three labor measures in the following order:

First, substitution of the drastic Smith bill, which bans mass picketing and violence as well as jurisdictional and sympathy strikes, requires a financial accounting by labor organizations, and compels a secret ballot before a strike can be called.

Second, if the Smith substitute was voted down, the Labor Committee compromise would be considered.

Third, if the Ramspeck compromise failed, Vinson would attempt to revive his plan for arbitration, enforceable on employees by withdrawal of privileges under the Wagner and Norris-LaGuardia Acts and all Federal bounties, and on employers by seizure of plants.

Representatives of C. I. O. affiliates started gathering in Washington for a conference Monday to combat any labor legislation as the three House and Senate units perfected their measures.

In the House Labor Committee, Representative Ramspeck moved first to add the Connally bill's full "seize-freeze" provisions to a new set of mediation steps. He was blocked by the committee, which opposed freezing of labor relations in plants taken over. Other provisions of the Connally plan were adopted by the House group, including Government operation of deadlocked plants and provisions for a wage board to adjust pay scales.

Board's Powers

As reported, the Ramspeck measure permits the Defense Mediation Board to take jurisdiction when collective bargaining and conciliation fail to settle a dispute. While mediating, the board could issue a "stop" order effective 60 days against organization of a strike or against a change in working conditions by employers. This could be enforced by injunction, with violators subject to contempt of court proceedings.

The board's order could not com-favor of legislation which would check defense-contract lobbying by former Government officials.

Reminded that there once was a regulation prohibiting retiring Federal officers from promoting Government contracts or engaging in similar activities for two years after leaving office, Mr. Roosevelt said he thought that was a good rule.

Chehrmann said he wanted his investigation to cover the activities of Thomas Corcoran, who retired as general counsel of the RFC last year and now has a law practice in which he has represented a number of manufacturer clients.

The Wisconsin Representative said his determination to press for a Congressional inquiry was strengthened when he learned of a suit filed in New York by Charles West, former Undersecretary of the Interior, for nearly $700,000 claimed in fees on 70 million dollars in defense contracts granted to the Empire Ordnance Corporation.

Chairman May (Democrat) of Kentucky, of the House Military Affairs Committee, said yesterday his committee might undertake an investigation of defense contract lobbying unless the matter were taken up by another group.

Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, said he would not object to inclusion of defense lobbying in the scope of his resolution proposing an inquiry into defense orders and small business. His resolution comes before the Rules Committee next week.

A bill to require publication of all fees above $10,000 paid in connection with defense contracts has been introduced by Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, is author of a bill which would bar former Government officials from practicing before any Government agency for two years after their retirement from the Federal service.

plants and strikes as to open or closed shop.

Surprise Report

The day's surprise came in the Senate Labor subcommittee's report of the comparatively moderate bill by Senator Ball, Minnesota Republican, first to seek to apply Gov. Stassen's State "waiting period" plan on a national basis. Subcommittee approval came after hearings on the more sweeping proposals of Senator Herring, of Iowa, a Democrat. Action was subject to approval of the full Labor Committee Monday morning.

The Ball measure, result of many redrafts of his original bill, makes it national policy "that employers and employees who become involved in labor disputes shall exhaust every possible method of settling such disputes without stoppage of work." It is permanent rather than emergency legislation, and, like the Railway Mediation Act, provides a set of procedures giving full play to the processes of collective bargaining, conciliation and voluntary arbitration.

Fish to Appear Before Jury On Wednesday

The Scribner's headquarters called for special equipment and adjustment, so that technicians had to make several trips from Chicago. When they were through Scribner's had a double recorder, with an automatic transfer.

If the record on one recorder came to an end while a foreign transmission was being received, this machine would switch to the other recorder, so not a word would be lost while the operator set up a fresh record.

Fred Kister, "radio editor" of Scribner's, took charge of this installation. In his spare time, Kister fixed up a weekly comparison of Axis and British military claims, which was published in the Herald with an analysis in which Kister always managed to reach the conclusion that the Germans told the truth and the British did not.

Associate of Vireck

More of the radio setup was maintained at the Nordenholt estate, in the huge Lake Geneva home of Seward Bishop Collins, 40.

Collins is a New York editor and writer, and an associate of George S. Vireck, Hitler's ace propagandist in America, who is scheduled to go on trial in Washington January 5 on an indictment of the Lake Geneva group. Missing with him was the extra copy of the anti-interventionist master mailing list given him a month ago by Beale in which the special grand jury accused him of concealing his propaganda and political activities.

Collins testified before the grand jury with the session of the House of Representatives or any of its committees of which you are a member.

"The grand jury is meeting in Room 312 of the Municipal Court Building, which is located at Fourth and E Streets Northwest, in this city."

Reynolds said that the letter had been received and that the date was satisfactory unless some committee meeting should come up in the meantime.

George T. Eggleston, editor of Scribner's Commentator, also appeared in answer to a subpoena yesterday, but the jurors did not have time to question him. It has not yet been decided when he will be recalled.

Foreman's Reply

Gorrell wrote in reply: "We thank you for your letter of November 28, 1941.

"The grand jury will be pleased to have you appear before it on Wednesday, December 3, 1941, at 9 o'clock a. m.

"It is hoped that this date and time will not interfere in any way jury in Washington today, after Federal officials had sought him for about 10 days.

It was through Collins that $3000 cash bond was put up for Fritz Griebel when she was arrested on an espionage charge in New York two years ago.

Two of Collins' short-wave receivers came from the same Chicago laboratories which produced the Scribner's instruments. They, too, had recording apparatus. One was operated in Collins' New York office, the other in his home at New Canaan, Conn.

Shortly after the Scribner's office was moved here, Collins followed, bringing both his short-wave receivers, several other powerful receivers, three German-speaking servants and a large car. His radio plant was manned night and day. He called experts from Chicago to assure the best short-wave performance and recording.

Townsend Still Missing

Still missing here today was Ralph Townsend, former consular officer in China, author of "Ways That Are Dark," an anti-Chinese book of a decade ago, and spokesman of a Feagin, Scribner's promotion manager.

Federal agents combed Lake Geneva in a nation-wide search for Townsend ordered last Monday by Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, Jr., after the man failed to appear before the special grand jury as scheduled.

$20,000 Proposed For Study of U. S. Responsibilities to District System

The Senate District Committee yesterday approved a resolution appropriating $20,000 for an investigation of the Federal Government's participation and responsibilities in the District's water-supply system.

At the same meeting, presided over by Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, seven other measures were passed in 17 minutes.

A House-passed bill appropriating $18,000 to set up aviation ground-school training in local high schools was approved, as was a bill authorizing food inspectors to destroy impure food offered for sale in the District.

Other House-approved noncontroversial measures which were passed swiftly would create the office of deputy clerk in the District Court to conform with a like office in other jurisdictions; increase the powers of the Board of Public Welfare and increase the penalty for conveying contraband goods into District penal institutions.

Fund Bill Approved

The committee approved a bill, on which the House has not yet taken action, which would permit the District government to receive up to six million dollars from the Federal Works Agency under the Lanham Act providing for national defense construction.

Renat F. Camaller, District Committee adviser, pointed out that the Commissioners have been advised they will receive only about two million dollars, chiefly for sewer and water improvements.

Also approved was a bill which would place employees of the Board of Public Welfare under the civil service merit system.

Senator Tydings introduced a bill which would exempt from taxation District property of the National Society of Colonial Dames of America.

"The Commissioners should draw a line of distinction between non-profit property and that which is in whole or in part profit-making property," he told Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keach.

Keach replied that a study will be made for the purpose of recommending legislation which will distinguish types of local taxable and nontaxable property.

Camaller announced last night that he has requested President Roosevelt to sign the District rent-control bill on December 2 in order that it will become effective on January 1, obviating the necessity of any partial month rent computations.

The rent bill specifies that it will become effective 30 days after its enactment.

He also announced that Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio, will conduct hearings on a bill setting fees of out-of-town sightseers buses next Friday at 10 a. m. A meeting of the full District Committee will follow to act on the measure.

Missionary Hopes Prayer Can Avert War

Before a small cluster of worshippers—including an evening-gowned woman and her tuxedoed escort, and two Salvation Army ladies—Dr. E. Stanley Jones last night opened a 7-day, 24-hour prayer vigil for peace, especially in the Pacific, at Epiphany Episcopal Church.

"If there was ever a need in the Nation's Capital for prayer, this is the guidance and direction," the Maryland-born missionary to India told the vigilists, "we as a people need it."

Capitol Hill is confused, needs the clarity of vision that prayer can bring, he said, while his hand gripped a Bible. "We shall need almost superhuman faith and confidence to keep us from collapsing with despair—months of war."

Believing there is still hope for an amicable settlement in the Pacific, the committee arranging the vigil yesterday morning sent cables to Kagawa, famed Japanese Christian to China and Australia, telling them of the prayer movement.

Kagawa and he prayed together last July on Lake Geneva, Switzerland, said the missionary.

Throughout next week, various laymen and clerics will lead the vigils—sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches and the Washington Ministerial Union. Epiphany's sessions—Edward Brown and George Stanton, are going on 12-hour shifts during the vigil.

Women Hear Plea For More Aid to 10 Million Lepers

Women from more than 50 local Protestant churches yesterday heard Mrs. E. R. Kellersberger call for greater spiritual and material aid to the world's ten million lepers.

Mrs. Kellersberger, wife of the general secretary of the American Mission to the Lepers, addressed the semiannual meeting of the Washington City Auxiliary Mission to the Lepers at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church. Author of two books on Africa—"Congo Crosses" and "God's Ravens," she has just returned after 14 years' service there.

MEETING ENDS WITH BANQUET AT PRESS CLUB—Conference of George Washington University's High School Press Association ended last night with a banquet at the National Press Club. Pictured here, looking over the program, were (from left) Evelyn Elliott, editor of the Blue and Gold, student-published paper of the Gaithersburg (Md.) Mason Heads National Yule Tree Program

Appointment of Commissioner Guy Mason as chairman of the national committee on National Christmas Tree ceremonies December 24 was announced yesterday.

The complete make-up of other committees also was disclosed at a meeting of the arrangements group at Mt. House Inn. At the same time, plans were announced for handling of traffic and the tentative program, featuring the President's annual holiday message, was revealed.

Newton B. Drury, director of the National Park Service, will serve as vice chairman of the national committee. The 28 members are leaders in educational, professional, business and club activities of the Capital.

Miss Sibyl Baker will serve as chairman of the executive committee, with Ovid Butler and Edward Kelly as vice chairmen. John S. Brown is chairman of the committee on tree decoration and John A. Remon will head the broadcasting committee.

According to the tentative program for the tree-lighting ceremonies in the south grounds of the White House, the Marine Band will open its concert at 4:30 p. m. President Roosevelt is scheduled to emerge onto the portico at 5 p. m.

Following delivery of the invocation, Commissioner Mason will open the broadcast portion of the program with a three-minute address. Then the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will be greeted by Boy and Girl Scouts. Next, the Chief Executive will pull a switch illuminating the tall spruce which was recently transplanted in the south grounds. Thereupon he will deliver his Yuletide greeting to the Nation.

Carols, a cornet solo and the benediction will close the exercises, which will be carried by the radio networks.

Still undecided is the question whether the carols will be sung by a small chorus or by a group of 1000 trained voices. If the latter, the singing will be by the White House, singing by the entire massed assembly probably will be encouraged.

Anacostia Citizens Hold Civilian Defense Rally

A civilian defense rally to spur citizens of their area on to greater efforts in the local air-raid wardens service was held by the Anacostia Citizens' Council last night, following their meeting in the Anacostia Junior-Senior High School, Sixteenth and R Streets Southeast.

Members attended a business meeting of the organization and later adjourned to the auditorium to take part in the rally. "The object of civilian defense is eventually to spread to every citizen of the United States," Capt. F. Joseph Donohue, of the Marine Corps, declared in a talk on the "What, Why, Where, Who and When of Civilian Defense."

Representative W. R. Poage (Democrat), of Texas, emphasized the serious need of an efficient civilian defense in this country "for the preservation of liberty, freedom and democracy." John J. Watson, president of the association, presided at the meeting. It was decided to postpone the December session.

"Now, get off that bike," ordered the man, flashing a revolver. "And give me your money."

Press Club Banquet Brings Conference To a Conclusion

Jack Reedy, editor in chief of the Gonzaga Aquilian, was elected president of the George Washington University High School Press Association at its conference yesterday attended by 300 aspiring high school journalists from the District, Maryland and Virginia.

Dorothy Montgomery, feature editor of the McKinley Tech Life, was elected vice president, and Wilma Schoenmaker, feature editor of Crossed Sabers, publication of Washington and Lee High School, Arlington, Va., secretary.

Closing event of the one-day conference was a banquet at the National Press Club, at which Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Washington Post, gave an off-the-record speech. Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, president of the university, presided.

Bronze keys were awarded at the banquet to students whose work was adjudged best in four divisions. They went to Jules Edlavitch, Baltimore City College Collegian, news stories; Fred Bosa, Roosevelt reporter, features; Robert Butman, Wilson Beacon, editorials; John Sheeskin, Central Bulletin, sports, and John K. McCormack, Gonzaga Aquilian, columnist. All but Edlavitch are connected with Washington School papers.

Speakers at the general morning session of the conference included Raymond Clapper, columnist; B. M. McKelway, managing editor of the Washington Evening Star, and Frank C. Waldrop, foreign and political editor of the Washington Times-Herald.

Civic Groups Choose Harris For President

Edward Harris, acting president of the Federation of Civic Associations since the fall of Col. H. D. Quinn to service in the Army, was elected president of that body last night by the 76 delegates present, at a meeting held in the board room of the District Building.

The newly elected president, who is also president of the Lincoln Civic Association, was installed by Hugh Bradford, who presided over the election. Others elected and installed included:

Mrs. Velma Williams, member of the Board of Education and president of Pleasant Plains Association, first vice president; Guy Tinner, Bloomfield, second vice president; Mrs. Edna West Payton, Lincoln, recording secretary; Mrs. Martha Simpson, Kingman Park, assistant secretary; Woolsey W. Hall, Central Northwest, corresponding secretary; W. D. Nixon, East Central, treasurer, and the Rev. James D. Pair, Pleasant Plains, chaplain.

The federation authorized special Christmas programs at Blue Plains Industrial Home School, the National Training School for Boys and the National Training School for Girls. A committee—E. L. Lovett, Mrs. Lucinda Miner and Bernard Chapman—was appointed to meet tonight with representatives of the Federation of Citizens Association, to organize a city-wide drive for civic association members.

The federation received a letter of commendation from Commissioner John Russell Young for activity in setting up air warden service in various communities.

sulted in the slaying of the country squire the following Sunday night.

Young Porter, was born on Washington's Birthday in 1923, and went to Woodward School after finishing the ninth grade at Langley School.

Paul (Pete) Hoback, who was with Porter when Loveless with shot and who was arrested with him in Cumberland, was returned to Leesburg by police early today. Young Porter was left in Winchester for "purely police purposes," according to Commonwealth's Attorney Charles H. Harrison.

Police Chief C. W. Hollis, of Winchester is anxious to question both youths in connection with a series of burglaries there. Among them are a store, two gasoline stations and a dry cleaning establishment in which a hat bearing the initials "A. T." which was found in the Loveless house was believed stolen.

The boys spent Thursday night in a Bristol, Va., jail after their arrest earlier in Appalachia, Va. They had fled to the latter town from Cumberland, Ky., following their dash from Leesburg in Loveless' green coupe.

State Senator Aubrey Weaver, of Front Royal, Va., has been retained to defend young Porter. The attorney met the elder Porter yesterday in Front Royal, after which they drove to Leesburg to await the arrival of the boy. Later both Porter and Weaver left for their respective homes. They are expected to return to Leesburg to talk with the boy.

Weaver said that the boy's father is "quite broken up."

"Mr. Porter, he said, 'is a highly respected man, employed in the treasurer's office of the Southern Railway. The reason that I am retained to defend the boy is because I have been counsel for the railroad for about 40 years."

"I shall talk with the boy as soon as I can. I plan to ascertain the true facts and my policy shall be one of fairness in cooperating with Virginia authorities. That's all I can say right now."

H. R. Hoback, father of "Pete," said last night that he will "do all I can" for his son. He said he plans to go to Leesburg today or Monday to talk with the boy. He said he will retain an attorney "if it will do any good."

Hoback is a fireman for the Norfolk & Western Railroad.

New Scheme 'Babes in the Wood' Rescued, But Alma Dislikes Potatoes

Representative Case (Republican), of South Dakota, yesterday introduced a resolution in the House calling for creation of a committee on capital clearance to study the practicability of obtaining lands now occupied by District public institutions "for better public use" in the form of slum-clearance and similar projects.

His resolution specifically cited the National Training School for Boys, the National Training School for Girls, the farm operated in connection with Soldiers' Home and St. Elizabeths Hospital, the Columbia Institution for the Deaf, lands of the Home for the Aged and Infirm and the Industrial Home School at Blue Plains, the Industrial Home School for Colored Children, and that part of the Arlington Experimental Farm and adjoining Federal lands not essential to the needs of the War Department.

Membership of the committee would be composed of Commissioner John Russell Young, Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Park and Planning Commission, and Col. Philip B. Fleming, Federal Works Administrator. The measure would require a report from the committee within 60 days.

Representative Case estimated, last night that "several hundred acres" would be freed "for greater public benefit" if the institutional lands were narrowed.

Stating that the proposal "should serve a double purpose," he declared that the freed lands could be used both for slum clearance projects and for highway and parking facilities to help relieve Washington's traffic congestion problem.

His resolution states that the proposed committee should investigate the desirability of procuring for better public use in slum-clearance projects, parks, parking areas, streets and highways, building projects or other public purposes the lands occupied by the above-mentioned institutions.

It directs the committee to confer with the heads of Government subdivisions or executive departments having jurisdiction over the institutions, and "transfer, purchase or lease" the lands with the right to "relocate or reconstruct physical plant on other sites."

With the receipt by the House yesterday of a report from the Public Buildings and Grounds Committee on the 300-million-dollar defense Housing bill, it is expected that allocation might be made for this area if the measure is passed.

While the bill does not specify communities for allocation of funds, it includes a list of communities for Federal women workers.

Representative Lanham (Democrat), of Texas, the committee chairman, said construction under the measure would be for homes for industrial workers and employees of the War and Navy Departments.

At the same time Representative Lanham introduced a provision for an additional 150 million dollars for public works needed in communities affected by the national defense program.

Stating that the proposal "should serve a double purpose," he declared that the freed lands could be used both for slum clearance projects and for highway and parking facilities to help relieve Washington's traffic congestion problem.

His resolution states that the proposed committee should investigate the desirability of procuring for better public use in slum-clearance projects, parks, parking areas, streets and highways, building projects or other public purposes the lands occupied by the above-mentioned institutions.

It directs the committee to confer with the heads of Government subdivisions or executive departments having jurisdiction over the institutions, and "transfer, purchase or lease" the lands with the right to "relocate or reconstruct physical plant on other sites."

With the receipt by the House yesterday of a report from the Public Buildings and Grounds Committee on the 300-million-dollar defense Housing bill, it is expected that allocation might be made for this area if the measure is passed.

While the bill does not specify communities for allocation of funds, it includes a list of communities for Federal women workers.

Representative Lanham (Democrat), of Texas, the committee chairman, said construction under the measure would be for homes for industrial workers and employees of the War and Navy Departments.

At the same time Representative Lanham introduced a provision for an additional 150 million dollars for public works needed in communities affected by the national defense program.

Case Offers Plan To Obtain Lands Unused by Public Institutions Here

Representative Case (Republican), of South Dakota, yesterday introduced a resolution in the House calling for creation of a committee on capital clearance to study the practicability of obtaining lands now occupied by District public institutions "for better public use" in the form of slum-clearance and similar projects.

His resolution specifically cited the National Training School for Boys, the National Training School for Girls, the farm operated in connection with Soldiers' Home and St. Elizabeths Hospital, the Columbia Institution for the Deaf, lands of the Home for the Aged and Infirm and the Industrial Home School at Blue Plains, the Industrial Home School for Colored Children, and that part of the Arlington Experimental Farm and adjoining Federal lands not essential to the needs of the War Department.

Membership of the committee would be composed of Commissioner John Russell Young, Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Park and Planning Commission, and Col. Philip B. Fleming, Federal Works Administrator. The measure would require a report from the committee within 60 days.

Representative Case estimated, last night that "several hundred acres" would be freed "for greater public benefit" if the institutional lands were narrowed.

A dark, high-contrast black and white photograph showing a dense, textured surface, possibly a wall or a large rock formation. The image is characterized by deep shadows and bright highlights, creating a complex, almost abstract pattern of light and dark areas. A prominent vertical crease or crack runs down the center of the image, dividing it into two main sections. The overall effect is one of mystery and depth, with the texture appearing rough and uneven.

Left—University of Maryland players give a demonstration of the "first basketball game," complete with sideburns and old-fashioned rules, at the boys' basketball clinic at College Park last night. Here the players scramble in the grandstands for a ball that is "free" when out of bounds according to old rules. Right—Clair Bee, coach of the Long Island University team, chats with Derr Swisher, president of the Southern Maryland Association of Health, Physical Education and Recreation which sponsored the event. A score was kept on the L. I. U.-Georgetown demonstration game that climaxed the program, as the two teams met later in the year in Madison Square Garden.

Wholesale Egg Prices Tumble; Receipts Heavy

New York, Nov. 28 (AP)—Egg prices on the wholesale market here tumbled today, the first in a series of drops. The chief cause for the drop was credited to the large increase in supplies of nearby white and brown eggs. Traders looked for lower values when shipments from the West arrive the early part of next week.

Another influencing factor was the Government purchase of only 267,000 pounds of whole dry eggs this week compared with over two million pounds last week.

N. A. S. D. Opposes Curb Application

The National Association of Securities Dealers opposed a Securities Commission hearing yesterday on the request of the New York Curb Exchange to extend unlisted trading privileges to certain securities now traded in the over-the-counter market.

The intervention was the first time that the association has opposed the granting of such privileges and officials of the NASD said that it marked a new policy number under which all such applications by exchanges will be studied in the future.

Drop Foreseen In Construction

Construction next year probably will fall "moderately below" the estimated $10,500,000,000 for this year, the Commerce Department predicts.

Priorities, it was explained, are bound to cut into residential and other private construction, and the loss in this field probably will be made up in anticipated Government construction for defense.

Production of distilled spirits climbed to 30,666,595 tax gallons in October, nearly 8,000,000 gallons more than in the similar month last year.

The Treasury said that in the first four months of the current fiscal year output has totaled 72,823,138 gallons, compared with 53,295,438 gallons in the similar period last year.

Pivotal Issues Spin Lower on Far East Crisis

New York, Nov. 28.—Leading stocks dropped to their lowest ground for more than a year in today's market as United States-Japanese relations appeared near the breaking level and heavy tax selling persisted.

Feeble attempts at recovery in the forenoon got nowhere in particular and, while a smattering of favorites clung to modest improvement, losses of fractions to around 2 points were well in the majority at the close.

But in the indictment, in addition to Colecott, were John V. Waite, Pittsburgh kinsman; Samuel O. Stauch, Klan kludde, of Philadelphia; and Walter H. Klineburg, Pittsburgh officer of the organization.

The jury said it found that in the Klan activities here "overt and subterfuge were freely employed to conceal the true nature and significance of their operations." The jury.

Even the name of the organization was camouflaged. They hid behind the name of the Keystone State National Society in order to deny the Klan connection and to give the true identity and purpose of the organization. The name (Keystone) was used as a cloak and a blind.

The organization was an association of un-American in principle and as tending, through its propaganda and doctrines of hate and racial and religious prejudice to harden the hearts of its members and to make them national unity vital to our country at this critical time.

Charlotte, N. C., Nov. 28 (AP).—Elwin B. Michael, 32-year-old circus manager, was arrested here today on a 17 in connection with the murder poisoning of 11 Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus elephants, which was released from jail today.

Detective Charles J. Littlejohn said that he believed the Iowan was "completely innocent."

Michael's arrest followed his identification by a Chicago police officer, said two Gastonia, N. C., men who told police Michael was the man they saw feeding capsules to the elephants.

Barbarr, formerly with the government's equipment rental company, was assigned to the quartermaster's office at Millington, Tenn., where he was told that the Government paid for rentals for equipment which was little used.

Barbarr said he was told before it was essential due to fear it might not be obtainable in time to competition for build-

Another contributor, S. R., had a hand which looked good for a slam, but he was greatly surprised by the result. This is how he describes the deal:

"I was so pleased with the hand that I gloated aloud, saying, 'Him, wonder whether I should say six or seven.'"

"I beg your pardon, my dear friend," said my right-hand opponent, but it's I who must decide whether to bid six or seven; you have to be holding my hand."

"Oh, misadventure! I'm sure I'm up a powerful house like that, then discovering it's some one else's property. A rotten break, I call it!"

On the contrary we call it a wonderful break for S. R. The hand rightfully belonged to his adversary; but by accidentally picking it up he escaped having a slam bid and made against him. The "International Law of Contract Bridge" that I have must be a new deal by the same dealer with the same or a correct pack if, when the deal is completed, a player picks up another player's hand and looks at it. It is held to be a new deal when looking at a slam hand while the rightful owner had nothing but a new deal.

Welders Defer Coast Strike For 1-Card Plan

Another threatened strike of West Coast welders, charging discrimination against them by A. F. of L. metal trades union, has been deferred pending conferences between the unionists and Federal officials, Sidney Hillman, associate director of the OPM, announced yesterday.

He disclosed that Commander G. M. Keller, representing the Navy's shipbuilding projects, and Paul Porter of the OPM labor staff, are going to Los Angeles and San Francisco for several days of conferences. They will seek to effectuate a pledge of A. F. of L. officials to grant the welders a "one-card" transfer system and to eliminate excessive dues.

The welders, who seek independent recognition, have charged the A. F. of L. required them to carry cards and pay dues for several different crafts, and had failed to make good its promise to institute the one-card arrangement.

Machinists' Dispute Ends

Meantime, as a result of conferences with Hillman's division on Thursday, George Meany, A. F. of L. secretary-treasurer, announced an agreement yesterday "that disposed of the controversy" leading to a three-day jurisdictional strike this week of 8500 machinists in St. Louis.

Meany declined to give details of the settlement.

A specially reconvened emergency fact-finding board yesterday heard a compromise wage proposal from 19 railroad brotherhoods, who have threatened a national transportation strike on December 7.

The brotherhoods, which had originally asked a flat 30 per cent wage increase, modified their demands to a dollar a day pay increase for the 1,250,000 employees of the Nation's railways.

Extra Cost 130 Millions

It was estimated that the demand, equivalent to a 15 to 20 per cent hike in pay, would cost the roads about 130 million dollars more than the compromise proposal originally recommended by the five-man emergency board when it concluded extensive investigation of the dispute a few weeks ago.

The board was reconvened by President Roosevelt after the "big five" operating brotherhoods rejected the compromise and voted to strike.

In accordance with procedure suggested by Mr. Roosevelt, the board will devote today to hearing the case of the railroad owners. It was asked to render its report to the President on Monday.

Montgomery Home for Yule

An unrollicking sailor fresh from the seas, home for the first time since last July, used his sea legs on the Mayflower Hotel's deep carpets yesterday to avoid the ladies as best he could.

This strangest recorded behavior on the part of a sea-going man was demonstrated by Lieut. Robert Montgomery, U. S. N., back in America on a 30-day leave from duty as an assistant naval attaché at the American Embassy in London, where he was sent in July. He entered the hotel so quickly yesterday that nobody spotted him. But word got about that he was there and on leaving at 3:30 p. m. he was spotted by two blondes and three brunettes, posted in wait on the mezzanine.

They got him again at the National Airport when he took a plane for New York City at 4:10 p. m. A girl recognized him, then a dozen or more poked little slips of paper under his nose for him to sign. A heavy-set man broke the monotony of it.

Pulling out an old envelope, he said: "I must of seen you in the movies a hunder time down at Fredericksburg. Sign that there. And how're you feeling, big boy?"

"Big Boy" was feeling tired, and with a long trip still ahead. Montgomery plans to be back in Washington next week and from here he will go to Beverly Hills to spend Christmas with his family. Then he will return to England. Working for the Navy, Montgomery is in a showbovy over there. But what he's doing he can't say because of the service restrictions. He is in the service "for the duration." Incidentally, he is a good sailor—never seasick once. He had only one thing to say of England, permissibly, now:

"The stories of their courage aren't overdrawn."

He will go back to the movies when the war is over, "if they still want me."

Chest Seeks $400,000 By Tuesday

"A flood-tide of generosity" is needed by the Community Chest to reach its 2-million-dollar goal by 12:30 p. m. Tuesday, the next report meeting of the extended campaign, the Chest headquarters said last night.

Volunteer campaigners are going "all out" today, Sunday and Monday in an effort to bring in $400,000 necessary to put the drive over the top.

Delay weakens the effect of your generosity. Planning and proper budgeting of funds is the essence of usefulness under the Chest plan," said Herbert L. Willett, Jr., the Chest director.

The executive committee, he said, would meet Friday, December 5, without fail, to determine the amount of the total sum which can be made available for the 85 varieties of welfare services performed by the Chest agencies. Beginning Monday, December 8, the budget committee is scheduling four meetings a week to apportion the funds available among the 59 agencies. Time is our target.

"You can't say to an institution which shelters homeless children that you hope community generosity will make it possible to take care of 100 children and later on say—sorry, but there is only enough to take care of 80 children. "Surely the people who are willing to give for the care of the sick, the young and the helpless in our community are just as eager to give before the Tuesday, December 2, report meeting as they will be after."

There are almost 117,000 Government employees who have not yet contributed to the Chest, said Wayne C. Taylor, Government unit chairman.

The Tuesday report meeting will be held at the Willard Hotel.

D. C. Hospitals Face Shortage Of Nurses

Hospitals in the District of Columbia are facing a "very serious shortage of nurses" and also a possible shortage of internes, Lucia Murchison, first assistant superintendent of Children's Hospital, yesterday told a class of civilian defense volunteers interested in welfare work.

"With the Army in need of several thousand doctors, we have the question of how long medical graduates will be permitted even a year of internship," she said. "Just what is going to happen to the staffs of our hospitals is a matter of concern to everyone in the community."

Although Washington spends less than half "the standard of $2.19 per capita for health," the past five years have seen marked decreases in the local infant, tuberculosis and pneumonia death rates, Miss Murchison said.

"As for venereal diseases—in which we lead the country—it seems to me we cannot expect a marked drop until we spend some money. Today we spend twice as much treating insanity due to syphilis as we do to fight syphilis itself," she declared.

Contributions of private agencies to health work in the District were outlined by Miss Murchison, who pointed out that legislative corrections and increased appropriations often were due to the "consistent pounding" of a private organization.

She pointed out that the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, a private agency, has 70 nurses—or almost as many as the 98 in the Public Health Service of the District.

"Together, however," she said, "both forces are about half as large as is needed. According to accepted standards, there should be 331 public health nurses to serve a city of this size."
